HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, June 13, 1929

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Heavenly Father and our God, Thy blessed word is with us, "He that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." May we come, for Thou wilt hear. May we trust the events of Thy providence and understand that all good work is immortal. Not one wise word was ever lost; not one righteous prayer ever perished; not one pure enthusiasm ever failed; not one self-sacrifice ever came to naught. Impress us that there is no satisfaction comparable to the joy of appointed duty wisely performed, and that there is no regret like the consciousness of opportunities and gifts wasted and lost. Keep us in that pathway that leads to the temple of wisdom and knowledge, and evermore inspire us to grow the beautiful flowers of the soul. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Craven, its principal clerk, announced that the Senate had passed, without amendment, a joint resolution and bill of the House of the following titles:

H. J. Res. 97. Joint resolution making appropriations toward carrying out the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for the establishment of a municipal center in the District of Columbia," approved February 28, 1929; and

H. R. 3317. An act to amend the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 1452. An act to authorize the State of West Virginia to acquire a bridge over the Kanawha River at Cabin Creek in said State, and to acquire the right to construct a bridge over said river at or near St. Albans in said State.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BOX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that tomorrow, after the approval of the Journal and the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, I be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

FARM RELIEF

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 1) to establish a Federal farm board to promote the effective merchandising of agricultural commodities in interstate and foreign commerce, and to place agriculture on a basis of economic equality with other industries, with the amendment of the Senate thereto, insist on the disagreement to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa offers a motion, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk reported Mr. HAUGEN's motion.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, the only issue involved at this time in respect to the farm relief bill is the debenture plan. The report of the conferees has been agreed to with the exception of that one provision. It is generally understood, and I shall not take up the time to discuss the debenture plan. The House is anxious that this matter be disposed of and have the matter go to conference in order that we may expedite the passage of the bill. I therefore move the previous question.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. JONES of Texas. When will it be in order to move to instruct the conferees?

The SPEAKER. After the passage of the motion and before the appointment of the conferees by the Chair. The question is on ordering the previous question on the motion of the gentleman from Iowa.

The previous question was ordered.

Mr. TILSON and Mr. JONES of Texas rose.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following preferential motion, which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will first recognize the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following motion, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

By Mr. TILSON:

"Resolved, That the managers on the part of the House on the disagreeing vote of the two Houses on the bill H. R. 1 be instructed in conference to insist on striking out of the Senate amendment section 10, the so-called debenture plan."

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, a vote on the amendment I have offered will bring to a direct vote and a definite conclusion the controversy over the debenture plan, that is, as to whether it shall go into the bill or not. I believe that this is the most direct way and perhaps the only way that we can get this bill passed. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on my amendment.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the previous question on the motion of the gentleman from Connecticut.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 250, nays 113, answered "present" 2, not voting 65, as follows:

FATALITIES IN PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

Mrs. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by introducing two lists, one a list containing the names and circumstances in each case of persons killed or fatally injured by officers of the Bureau of Prohibition while acting in the discharge of their official duties, and the other a list of Federal prohibition officers who have been killed or fatally injured while actually engaged in their official duties, together with the attending circumstances, compiled from the date of the national prohibition act, January 16, 1920, to January 12, 1929. I have obtained the list from the Bureau of Prohibition.

The SPEAKER. The gentlewoman from California asks unanimous consent to extend her remarks in the RECORD by printing lists of persons, including Federal officials, who have been killed or fatally injured in the enforcement of the prohibition law. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the lady from California if this includes assaults against Federal officials or only assaults by Federal officials?

Mrs. KAHN. It includes those killed or fatally injured. It is a list of fatalities on both sides. I obtained the list from the head of the Bureau of Prohibition, Doctor Doran.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Does this include the immigration border patrol?

Mrs. KAHN. No. It includes the prohibition and narcotic administration officers.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Why is not the border patrol included?

Mrs. KAHN. That was not given to me by the Prohibition Department; and that is, of course, under another department.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I have no objection to the request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mrs. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include a list containing the names and circumstances in each case of persons killed or fatally injured by officers of the Bureau of Prohibition while acting in the discharge of their official duties, and also a list of Federal prohibition officers who have been killed or fatally injured while actually engaged in their official duties, together with the attending circumstances, compiled from the date of the national prohibition act, January 16, 1920, to January 12, 1929.

On the way there the party of officers met C. P. Sherman, the owner of the ranch, who accompanied the officers. Upon arrival at the ranch Sherman stepped behind a small building and fired upon the officers. At the same time a volley of shots came from various other points. Rouse, Agent Jackson, and George P. Busch, assistant administrator, proceeded to this vicinity. About 12.30, June 8, while driving east in Hager Street, Rouse and Jackson saw a car parked in Wayson Alley. Stopping their car, they ran a short distance down Wayson Alley to where the car was drawn up alongside a garage, which was attached directly to the house on the corner of Wayson Alley and Hager Street, No. 1107. Two men were in the act of unloading materials from the car into the garage. After revealing their identity, Agent Jackson seized one of the men and Busch held to the other. At this time Rouse said, "Wait a minute," and Busch turned in time to see him enter the garage door. A light was shining out through the rear door of the house, which led directly into the garage, and there were shadows of persons on the wall cast by the reflection of the light. At the same instant that Rouse entered three shots were fired in quick succession. Busch saw flashes from the gun which appeared to be pointed directly at the garage entrance. Four or five more shots were fired, and Rouse called to Busch, and two more shots were fired as Busch entered the garage door. Rouse called, "For God's sake, Mr. Busch, come here; they got me." Busch found Mr. Rouse in the rear of the garage, slightly bent forward, with his hands pressed to his stomach. He was rushed to Mercy Hospital and received immediate treatment. The bullet was not located and peritonitis set in, and he died at 11.20 a. m., June 12. Jackson took his prisoner to the police station, and police assisted in a search for the slayers, but the men who did the shooting have not been apprehended, consequently no action has been taken in the courts.

They started for the police station in the agents' car, with Agent Wentworth driving and the other agent seated on the other side of Morris, who was thus between the two agents. After going some distance Morris placed his gun at Wentworth's side and commanded him to stop the car. When Wentworth did not comply, Morris shot him through the right side, the bullet passing through his stomach and out of the left side. Although wounded, Agent Wentworth pulled his gun and shot Morris through the heart, killing him instantly. Both men were taken to the Berkeley General Hospital, where Agent Wentworth died the following morning, November 24, 1926.

They found a still on the isolated ranch on Little Muddy Creek and destroyed it. Soytk was placed under arrest. He asked permission to get his hat and coat, and when he reappeared he had a rifle and shot Agent Capen in the abdomen. Epperson and Soytk then engaged in a duel, in which the officer sent six shots into the body of his opponent. Epperson then took the two wounded men in Capen's car and started for the hospital at Kemmerer, Wyo. Both of these men died just as they were being carried into the hospital.

Warren Frahm, prohibition agent, New York. On June 18, 1928, Agent Frahm, accompanied by Marvin Barnes, a reliable chauffeur, drove out on the Chateaugay-Brainardville Highway about one-half mile north of Brainardville in the town of Belmont, Franklin County, N. Y., to investigate the rum running on that road which was reported to be taking place after midnight. About 3 a. m. they started to return to Malone, without having seen any rum runners. At this time Frahm was driving his own car and Barnes the one owned by the Government, when they met two loaded cars driving at a high rate of speed and without lights. Barnes turned and followed one of the cars, which turned down a country road, and after a chase of two or three miles found the car mired in a barnyard, the driver having escaped. Frahm followed the other car. Indications are that Frahm attempted to pass the loaded car and was crowded off the road. His body was found about 200 feet from his car, which had turned turtle, rolling over two or three times. An autopsy revealed two vertebrae of the neck broken, an abdominal rupture, internal injuries sufficient to cause death, and three of his lower ribs were crushed. The owners of the cars and drivers were ascertained.

Wesley A. Frazer, prohibition agent, Minnesota. On December 9, 1927, Agent Wesley A. Frazer and Agent Carl E. Olson made an investigation at 1408 Fifth Avenue South, South St. Paul, Minn. Through the basement door they could see a still and several barrels of mash, and distilling paraphernalia. Three violators were arrested, Sam Cimin, Pedro Francisco, and Sam Nondy, and taken to St. Paul for interrogation. On January 2 Agent Frazer accompanied by men from the Star Trading Co. went to the premises to finish taking away the seized property. Gulop Nickolich, the owner of the premises, was not at home, so the keys were not available, but Mrs. Nickolich said they could enter through a basement window. While they were working, loading some coke into the truck which they had backed up to the window, Nickolich approached with two men in a Ford coupé. He got out of the coupé and approached the truck. Passing the driver, he knelt on the ground by the window and fired two shots. He then made an attempt to shoot the driver, but was prevented by one of the men with him. Frazer, who was in the basement, was found struggling to crawl out of the window. He died on the way to the hospital. One shot had pierced his heart and the other his left wrist. The coroner's jury returned a verdict charging Gulop Nickolich with murder in the first degree.

W. T. Lewis, prohibition agent, North Carolina. On the morning of July 11, 1927, Deputy Administrator McDuffie with Prohibition Agents A. M. Beck, J. B. Rosser, W. T. Lewis, and C. W. Lineberger, a military policeman from Fort Bragg, N. C., left Fayetteville, N. C., with two automobiles as had been previously arranged by Lewis with Andrew Purefoy, the bootlegger from whom the purchase of 500 gallons of liquor was to be made. On arriving at Kinston, N. C., Lewis and Lineberger took the two cars, leaving the other agents just outside of Kinston. Following instructions, Lewis and Lineberger drove to Fort Barnwell, N. C., and parked their cars across from Luby Sauls filling station. Sauls directed them to drive to the rear of the station and stated that the men they wanted to see would soon be there. Soon Luther Sermons came up and inspected their cars, drove away, and returned in 15 minutes with his brother, Virgil Sermons, and Will Chapman, a negro. Virgil Sermons and Chapman took the agents' cars and drove away, and Luther Sermons asked Lewis and Lineberger to ride with him in his Dodge coupé. He took them toward New Bern for about 3 miles and then drove to the right over an old road about 2 miles. Soon the agents' cars came up loaded, and Lewis asked whom he should pay. Luther Sermons said he was the man. Lewis gave him a $20 bill and then both he and Lineberger informed the men that they were Federal officers and for them to consider themselves under arrest. Two shots were fired behind Lewis, one of them striking Virgil Sermons. At the time, Luther Sermons knocked the pistol from Lewis's hand and in the scuffle Lewis could not recover it. Lee Sermons, carrying a gun, came from a near-by house when he heard the shots. Lineberger gave chase to the negro, Chapman, who escaped and Lineberger was not seen again until the following morning. The men took Lewis's money and asked him to leave. He said, "If I leave you will shoot me." Luther Sermons replied that if he went immediately they would not shoot. Lewis started right away and two shots were fired striking him in the back. He managed to get to a farmer's house near by, and was taken to the Memorial General Hospital at Kinston, N. C., where he died on the morning of July 15, 1927.

George Nantz, prohibition agent, Kentucky. On the night of July 19, 1927, about 8.30 p. m., Agent George Nantz and Warren Scoville, sheriff of Laurel County, Ky., United States Marshal Berry Little, and Sam Morgan, deputy sheriff of Laurel County, went by automobile to Walnut Grove Camp, which is located about 300 yards from the Laurel County line, in Rockcastle County, Ky., on the Dixie Highway, and about 100 yards from the Rockcastle River. This camp had been complained of many times during the previous month because it was frequented by a bunch of undesirables and whisky had been received from persons living in that vicinity. When Agent Nantz and his posse arrived at the camp they proceeded to walk around to observe conditions, but when they entered the camp they were met by several men and a woman, all armed. The pistols were pointed at the officers and they were ordered to leave. Seeing they were outnumbered and not wishing to have trouble, the officers left and went back to London, Ky. The following morning, July 20, 1927, Agent Nantz procured a search warrant for the camp and also warrants for the arrest of Viola Oaks, Clarence Maddox, Alex Jones, and August Mullins, who were in the crowd that threatened them the night before. Going back to the camp they immediately arrested Viola Oaks, Pauline Hedrick, Alex Jones, and Esco Loy, and attempted to arrest Clarence Maddox. Maddox backed around a corner of the house and ran with his pistol in his hands, pursued by Agent Nantz, Sam Morgan, and B. L. Little. Maddox fired two shots over his shoulder as he ran and Nantz fired a shotgun. Another shot was fired by Maddox, which hit Agent Nantz in the right temple, causing instant death. Maddox was finally captured, his pistol containing three empty shells. All the prisoners were taken to London, Ky., and placed in jail awaiting examining trials on Federal charges.

They will also be turned over to State authorities for prosecution in State court.

Walter R. Tolbert, prohibition agent, Georgia. On the morning of February 22, 1928, Agent Walter R. Tolbert, accompanied by Policemen W. S. Harrison, jr., and D. T. Fuller, of Harlem, Columbia County, Ga., raided a distillery about 5 miles south of Harlem. Men working at the still saw Tolbert approach and made their escape, so that when Tolbert and the other officers returned to the site the operators had abandoned it. After destroying the distillery the agents started to return by another road. They reached a point about a mile from the distillery when they were fired upon from ambush. Agent Tolbert had Harrison stop the car, and as he, Tolbert, stepped on the running board preparatory to getting out to investigate the shooting, a ball from a rifle struck him, penetrating his heart and entire body. He died almost instantly. Six suspects were placed in jail, and one, Burley Adams, confessed to having killed Agent Tolbert, though he had meant to kill W. S. Harrison, sr., a county officer.

Ludwig Johnson, prohibition agent, Washington. On the night of July 25 Agents Ludwig Johnson, Arthur Means, and Gerald Church went out near Leavenworth, Wash., to locate a still which had been reported. About 11 p. m., while proceeding along a trail which is densely wooded the agents came upon a new Ford car parked, which they supposed belonged to the moonshiners. Agent Johnson stayed near the car and Agents Means and Church proceeded along the trail toward the still. They saw two men approaching, whom they thought were moonshiners but who were, in reality, the Chelan County sheriff and his deputy. The parked car belonged to the sheriff, and as they approached the car Agent Johnson announced loudly his identity, stating that he was a Federal prohibition agent, and commanded the men to halt; but the sheriff thought that Johnson was the moonshiner who had escaped from the still and kept on coming and grabbed for Johnson's gun. Agent Johnson believed that he was being attacked by the moonshiner, as he could determine that they were carrying parts of a still, and fired his gun apparently in the ground. The sheriff thereupon fired several shots at a distance of a foot or two into the body of Johnson. The deputy and Agents Means and Church joined in the shooting. Before the various officers had discovered the identity of the others Johnson had been seriously wounded. The sheriff and deputy received slight wounds. Agent Johnson died after an operation made in desperate attempt to save his life. No blame was attached to the actions of the Federal prohibition agents.

Irving Washburn, prohibition agent, New York. Prohibition Agent Washburn was shot when he invaded the Madison Avenue resort section with Wilfred Grisson, another officer, after having been warned not to do so. The shooting began at 2.30 the morning of July 13, 1928, after the arrest of Joseph Skepse in an automobile in that section. Before Washburn died he identified Barver Zulo, alleged proprietor of a soft-drink parlor from which the assailant is said to have emerged, as the man who shot him.

John Nicola, prohibition agent, Maryland. Fatally injured October 4, 1928, near Baltimore, Md. Agent Nicola, accompanied by Agents Nathaniel W. Bowes and John T. Weigel, with an unidentified prisoner, were proceeding east on the Baltimore Boulevard, when they observed a high-powered gray coupé, apparently loaded with liquor, driving west. The agents turned about and gave chase. The gray coupé came to a complete stop near the intersection of Ridge and Selma Avenues. In an attempt to avoid a collision Agent Nicola swerved suddenly to the left. A gutter depression caused the Cadillac to turn a complete somersault. Agent Nicola was caught under the steering wheel, terribly mangled. Agents Bowes and Weigel also received injuries. A man in a gray coupé volunteered to rush Agent Nicola to St. Agnes' Hospital, where he died as they were taking him to the operating room.

Patrick Sharpe, prohibition agent, Texas. Asphyxiated December 6, 1928, near Houston, Tex. Agent Sharpe, accompanied by L. P. Gillespie, James Fisch, and Prohibition Deputy Victor J. Buthod, went to the Vito Caruso farm, about 8 miles north of Houston, in Harris County, Tex., to search for a still. Agent Sharpe discovered a camouflaged trapdoor in the barn and upon opening it could see distilling apparatus in the room below. He descended the ladder and before Deputy Buthod could make the descent Agent Sharpe was overcome by gas fumes and all efforts to resuscitate him failed. Deputy Buthod was rendered unconscious, but later recovered.

Wood and Prohibition Agent Beckett, having information that a large quantity of whisky was being delivered by smugglers at the Shearman ranch 5 miles east of El Paso, Tex., procured a search warrant, and with Prohibition Agents Parker, McClure, Guinn, Giere, Quirk, Raithall, and Ornelas, proceeded to the ranch and on the way met C. P. Shearman, the owner, who insisted upon returning with them. Upon arriving at the premises, Shearman disengaged himself from the crowd, stepped behind a small building, and fired a shotgun in the direction of Agents Wood and Beckett, which was immediately followed by a volley of 20 to 50 shots from various points. The agents immediately took to cover and continued the gun fire for about two hours. Finally, Agents Guinn and Parker escaped, returned with reinforcements and found the combatants had disappeared, and it was at this time that the bodies of Agents Wood and Beckett were found riddled with gunshot.

Disposition of the case: Five of the principal parties in the battle, including all the Shearmans, have been indicted by the State grand jury for murder.

James E. Brown

Facts of the case: On June 7, 1928, James E. Brown went to a ranch house near Isleton, Calif., to search for narcotics. He arrested two Chinese, Ah Wong and Wong Toy, handcuffing Wong Toy and tying the hands of Ah Wong. After searching the premises he gathered up a quantity of narcotics found therein and a Luger automatic pistol which he had taken from the defendant Ah Wong. He left the two prisoners sitting in a room in the ranch house while he placed the narcotics and the pistol in his car outside the house. During his absence Ah Wong worked his hands round to the front of him and opened a small drawer in a table and secured a .38 Remington automatic pistol. As Agent Brown was about to enter the room, Ah Wong fired at him, the shot taking effect in the chest. Brown fell and Ah Wong fired three more shots, two of which took effect in the abdomen, and the other grazed the leg just above the ankle. This was about 5 p. m., on June 7, 1928.

Ernest E. Emily

Facts of the case: On the night of May 23, 1920, Prohibition Agents John C. Montgomery and William C. Vest located a car that was dispensing liquor to Indians and others in West Forks, Wash., but were unable to apprehend the driver, who tried to run down the agents each time they tried to stop the car. The agents shot at the tires and after a short distance the car stopped and the agents found that the driver, Ernest E. Emily, was mortally wounded.

Disposition of the case: Coroner's jury on May 26, 1920, brought in a verdict of murder against the two agents and the sheriff of Ferry County. The charge against the sheriff was dismissed and that against the agents reduced to manslaughter. Montgomery was acquitted April 21, 1921, and Vest was acquitted in October, 1921.

Horace Brown

Facts of the case: On December 20, 1920, Prohibition Agents L. W. Gerth and F. T. Rose, in company with Charles Carr and John Saunders, chauffeurs, pursued Philip Butler, James Butler, Clarence Butler, Flora Butler, Mattie Butler, and Horace Brown, who were endeavoring to make their escape after having been arrested by the above-mentioned prohibition agents for violation of the national prohibition act. As the agents' car was about to overtake the Butler machine Philip Butler fired three times. One of the shots struck Agent Gerth under the eye, another struck him in the back, and the third hit the car. After Philip Butler began firing Agent Gerth commenced shooting at the automobile and hit the tires of Butler's automobile, and one of the said shots struck Horace Brown, resulting in his death.

Disposition of the case: Indicted March 4, 1921, Circuit Court of Baltimore County, Md., for manslaughter. Case removed to United States District Court April 21, 1921. Verdict of not guilty returned January 6, 1922.

Robert Fuller

Facts of the case: While returning from a raid April 30, 1921, participated in by Agents Scruggs and Robert Fuller, deputy sheriff for Knox County, an altercation between the two men occurred, and the shooting resulted from order given Fuller by Scruggs to the effect that Fuller should not drink any of the seized whisky and that he should put up a gun which he had in his lap. It appears that Fuller became enraged and shot Scruggs, whereupon Scruggs fired back, killing Fuller instantly. Scruggs himself died on the operating table a few hours later at Knox County, Tenn.

Disposition of the case: No prosecution instituted.

Johnnie Garrett

Facts of the case: On December 16, 1920, Agent R. W. Jackson, in company with Agents English and Causey, conducted a raid in Taylor County, Ga., upon the premises of Napoleon Garrett. After destroying the still, C. M. Wadsworth and two negroes were placed under arrest. As they were conducting the prisoners to jail they were set upon by Napoleon and Johnnie Garrett and several other white men, who began firing with pistols and forced the officers to release their prisoners. Agents returned the fire and during the battle Agent Jackson was mortally wounded and died one and one-half hours later. Johnnie Garrett was instantly killed and Napoleon Garrett seriously wounded.

Disposition of the case: No prosecution instituted against the agents.

R. W. Hedderly

Facts of the case: On September 10, 1920, Prohibition Agent Delason C. Smith, Narcotic Agents William R. Wood and James J. Biggins, and Police Officers William D. Morris and Jackson, while attempting to apprehend and arrest R. W. Hedderly and one George Lewis, bootleggers, killed the said Hedderly while he was attempting to evade arrest by escaping in an automobile.

Disposition of the case: Indicted for manslaughter in State court. Tried at Portland, March 7, 1921, Biggins being acquitted, and the case against the other officers dismissed.

Bud Riley

Facts of the case: On March 28, 1921, Prohibition Agent Delford David Dougherty, with three police officers, started for the farm of Bud Riley in Greene County, Okla., for the purpose of searching for a still. They stopped a car on the way to inquire the location of the premises. The occupant of the car chanced to be Bud Riley, and he raised a gun and fired at one of the police officers, who fell to the ground as the shot passed over him. Agent Dougherty and Claude Hines, a police officer, simultaneously shot and killed Riley.

Disposition of the case: Indicted for murder. At close of second day of trial, November 28, 1921, the presiding judge instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty.

Louis Vokivich

Facts of the case: On the night of November 6, 1920, Prohibition Agent Glenn S. Young, in company with police officers of Granite City, Ill., raided a house in Madison, Ill., finding a still, some mash, and a small quantity of whisky. Agent Young learned that Louis Vokivich, who lived in the adjoining house, was a relative of the person he had raided, and, suspecting there might be some liquor in the house of Vokivich, he took a police officer with him and made an investigation of Vokivich's house. He claims he saw Vokivich drinking from a bottle as he passed a window, but when he asked admission he received no response. He and the policeman forced an entrance and found a 25-gallon keg of moonshine whisky. Vokivich pointed a pistol at Young and snapped it several times, but it failed to explode, and Agent Young fired several times in self-defense, killing Vokivich.

Disposition of the case: Indicted for murder. Acquitted June 10, 1921.

Barnette, Boston O'Neil, and Lonnie Atwell were transporting moonshine liquor; the bootleggers began to run and several shots were fired. Atwell was wounded and died in a hospital a few hours later.

Disposition of the case: Agents Phipps and Gillette were indicted and acquitted by a jury in a Federal court at Huntington.

Peeler Clayton

Facts of the case: On the night of December 15, 1921, Prohibition Agent Bassett R. Miles, accompanied by local officials, was engaged in enforcement work in the city of Austin, Tex. In an alley leading into San Jacinto Street, between Fifth and Sixth Streets, the officers attempted to stop a car in order to search it for liquor, but the occupants of the car opened fire on the officials, who returned fire. In the affair the driver of the car, a taxi, one Peeler Clayton, was killed.

Disposition of the case: Miles and the local officers indicted for murder by grand jury of Travis County. Case transferred to Federal court and listed for the June, 1924, term. Case dismissed for want of prosecution.

Knapp raided a moonshine still in Falling Water country about 5 miles west of Moore, Ark., and near the junction of the lines bounding Newton, Pope, Searcy, and Johnson Counties. Teddy Cox, one of the owners and operators of the still, ran into the shack where the still was being operated and returned with a Winchester rifle, apparently for the purpose of shooting the prohibition agents and sheriffs conducting the raid. In the shooting which occurred Teddy Cox was killed.

Disposition of the case: Grand jury of Newton County failed to return an indictment against the agents.

Joe Duncan

Facts of the case: On the morning of February 4, 1922, Prohibition Agent John Carroll Cate, accompanied by the sheriff and two deputies, raided an illicit distillery that was in operation on Spruce Pine Creek near the line between Greene and Washington Counties, Tenn. After watching the operation of the distillery by three men for about a half hour, the officers proceeded to arrest the men and destroy the outfit. The three moonshiners attempted to escape. Several shots were fired by the officers, but only for the purpose of frightening the fugitives. One of them, Joe Duncan, who was carrying a .38 special revolver in his hand, dropped behind a fallen tree and pointed the revolver at the officers. He was told to drop the gun but did not do so, whereupon he was shot by Agent Cate and fatally wounded.

Disposition of the case: Indicted in State court July 1, 1922, for murder; case referred to Federal court and tried April 6 and 7, 1923. Verdict of not guilty returned.

Boe Fugate

Instead of surrendering to the officers when they approached him and sought his arrest in Knott County, Ky., he opened fire on them, and the agents, as well as several of the possemen who were trying to apprehend Fugate, returned the fire and killed Fugate.

Disposition of the case: Indicted for murder April, 1922. Indictment dismissed for lack of prosecution.

Steve Isom

Facts of the case: On October 21, 1921, Prohibition Agent John D. W. Collins, accompanied by Possemen C. S. Day, Doak Hall, and Townsell Hall, was searching for a still operated by James and Steve Isom along the State line between Kentucky and Virginia in the county of Letcher. Collins and Townsell Hall were together and had separated from C. S. Day, and the latter two were raiding together and had just crossed over the line into Virginia, when they discovered about 30 yards away from them and in front a moonshine distillery in full operation by James and Steve Isom. On seeing the officers Steve Isom drew a pistol and fired at them, whereupon the possemen returned fire. Steve Isom was mortally wounded. Agent Collins was not present at the distillery when the shooting was going on, but he was indicted along with all three possemen, although but two of the possemen engaged in the shooting.

Disposition of the case: Indicted for murder September 13, 1922. Found not guilty October 8, 1923.

Bruce Kirby

Facts of the case: On September 7, 1921, during a raid on a still in Jeff Davis County, 4 miles west of Hazelhurst, Ga., Prohibition Agent G. C. Rogers shot and killed Bruce Kirby. While dying Kirby said he had tried to kill Rogers and did not blame him for having shot him. The records of the office indicate that Kirby was a desperate character, having killed his brother-in-law in 1919, shot another man, and having been released from the Jeff Davis County chain gang in March, 1921, after serving 22 months for stealing hogs.

Disposition of the case: Indicted for murder September 27, 1921. Tried May 29, 1922, and acquitted.

Facts of the case: On February 22, 1922, Prohibition Agent John W. Smith in company with county officials of Dickenson County, Va., and armed with a United States search warrant searched the premises of Arlett Kiser and found a complete illicit distillery in the basement of the house with all necessary accessories. They lay in wait for Kiser's return to the house and upon his return Agent Smith demanded his arrest, which Kiser resisted. He pulled a revolver and was about to discharge it at the agent, when the latter fired, the bullet striking Kiser in the right arm and ranging through his lungs. Kiser was a notorious bootlegger and Smith had been told by Kiser's wife that he would never be taken alive.

Disposition of the case: Tried before three justices of the peace March 8, 1922, and acquitted.

Chalmers McAlphine

Ferguson, accompanied by State officers, found three distilleries in operation located about 600 yards from the residence of Arthur Coggins and about 700 yards from the residence of a certain McAlphine in Clebourne County, Ala. The man in charge of the stills was arrested and stated that the outfits belonged to Archie McAlphine, Chalmers McAlphine, and Arthur Coggins. The officers proceeded to the McAlphine home, found Archie McAlphine, and placed him under arrest. Chalmers McAlphine was not at home and after a search he was found at the store of John Long about 3 miles from the scene of the illicit operations. McAlphine attempted to escape and Agent Ferguson and Sheriff Adams gave chase for some distance. At last, obstructed by a fence, McAlphine turned toward the officers with a pistol in his hand, evidently with the intention of shooting them. Agent Ferguson fired and his bullet resulted in McAlphine's death.

Disposition of the case: Indicted February 20, 1922, for murder. Acquitted January 23, 1924.

Willie Nelson

Facts of the case: On November 29, 1921, Prohibition Agent Maxey, in company with Federal agents and county officer, raided a distillery about 1½ miles from the main road between Morrison and Harpersville, Va. When about 30 yards from the still Maxey ordered the operators to throw up their hands, announcing himself and companions as officers. Willie Nelson, who was standing beside the mash boxes, grabbed his rifle and pointed it toward the officers, while the other operators of the still ran. Agent Maxey fired one shot. Nelson ran behind the mash boxes, and Maxey fired three more shots. After the other operators of the still were captured Nelson was found in the woods shot through the body. The officers took him to a hospital, where an operation was performed, but he died after an illness of about 10 days.

Disposition of the case: No prosecution was instituted against Agent Stapleton.

Joseph Sesqueria

Facts of the case: On the evening of June 10, 1922, Prohibition Agent Eddie Bogan and another prohibition agent were investigating violations of the national prohibition act in a dangerous section of Boston. While at their work they were recognized and attacked. After receiving minor injuries, they retreated to the Ferry House at the North Ferry. They were pursued, and one Joseph Sesqueria forced his way into the inclosure, rushing into the room in which they had taken refuge, smashed the agent who accompanied Bogan to the floor, and then started for Bogan, who warned him back, and then, in fear of his life, shot him, Sesqueria dying some two weeks later.

Disposition of the case: Agents were arrested by police and Bogan held. Tried in April, 1923, and Bogan found guilty of manslaughter. On petition to the Governor of Massachusetts, the sentence of Bogan was commuted, and he was released April 30, 1924.

F. D., Learned, Miss., the operators, attempted to make their escape. Agent Chapman fired his pistol twice in the air and commanded them to halt. Clarence Sturges went about 40 feet from the distillery, turned and fired at Chapman, and the latter then fired at him. Clarence Sturges then ran about 20 feet farther and again turned and fired at Chapman. Chapman then fired the second time and killed Clarence Sturges.

Disposition of the case: On September 12, 1921, Agent Chapman was completely exonerated by the circuit court grand jury, and indictments were returned against all of the alleged moonshiners in this case for illicit distilling.

Curtis Tidmore

Facts of the case: On the evening of September 28, 1921, Prohibition Agent Thomas C. Dews with other officers having a search warrant for the wagon of one Elmer Hufstutler and one Kirk Lewis, alias Curtis Tidmore, attempted to search the same on the public highway of Jefferson County, Ala. They drew their car up beside the wagon and asked the occupants to hold up a minute as they were Government officers, whereupon shots were fired from the wagon into the car of the agents. The agents returned the fire, and Tidmore was wounded. He was hurried to a hospital, but his life could not be saved.

Disposition of the case: Indicted in State court for second-degree murder. Tried in United States District Court at Birmingham, and Dews convicted and sentenced to three years in penitentiary.

Dorri, and William Loose, accompanied by a deputy sheriff and armed with a search warrant, searched for and found a shack 15 or 20 miles from the city of Antigo, Wis., in which two men named Wurzer and one named Pennington were operating a still. Some of the moonshiners had made threats as to what they would do to the officers who might try to arrest them. The violators were fully armed, and the country around the scene of action is a wild one. The agents and the deputy sheriff approached the moonshiners' shack with guns in hand. Just as an exchange of shots occurred Julius Wurzer attempted to escape through a door in the opposite side of the shack from that approached by the agents. He was fatally shot as he made his exit. He traveled some 30 or 40 feet and then collapsed and died shortly after.

Disposition of the case: These agents were charged with manslaughter. However, on September 8, 1923, an order was entered dismissing the action of the State of Wisconsin against these agents.

Harry Baker

Facts of the case: During July, 1922, agents W. W. Wooten and George Griffin took part in a raid on the Ferncliffe distillery at Louisville, Ky. Harry Baker was in a truck in which whisky which had been stolen from the distillery was being driven away. The occupants of the truck opened fire on the officers and tried to run down their car. The agents riddled the truck and Baker was killed. It was claimed that Agents Griffin and Wooten fired the shots that killed the man.

Disposition of the case: No criminal prosecution was instituted against these agents.

Bob Ballard

Facts of the case: On December 15, 1922, Agent Guy E. Cole, investigating moonshiners near Lexington, Ky., approached an empty house on the farm of Will Ferguson. Upon opening the door he was immediately shot by Bob or Charles Ballard, occupants of the house, who kept up continuous firing at accompanying agents, who had to run for cover. Bob Ballard was killed and Charles Ballard was wounded, although the latter escaped and was not caught until later. The first shot fired struck Agent Cole in the left eye, penetrating his brain, fracturing his skull, causing instant death.

Disposition of the case: No prosecution instituted.

Edgar Bunch

Facts of the case: On March 9, 1923, Prohibition Agents McNeil and Murphy, with local officers, while executing a search warrant for Edgar Bunch's soft-drink stand in Ashland, Ky., were fired upon by some one inside of said stand. After breaking down the door and entering, the officers found Mr. Bunch dead with a .38-caliber Colt's pistol with four empty shells lying beside his body.

Disposition of the case: At the May, 1923, term of the Boyd circuit court, the grand jury ignored the case against Prohibition Agents McNeil and Murphy and local officers.

Smokey Cash

Facts of the case: On June 24, 1923, Prohibition Agent Charles F. Buzzi, while raiding a road house near Sand Springs, Okla., in company with other officers, killed Smokey Cash, a negro, known to be a dope head and a bootlegger of the very worst type. Cash entered the road house during the progress of the raid, and while in there he seized a revolver which one of the agents had placed on a counter, apparently for the purpose of shooting the raiding officers, and started for the door. He was ordered to halt, but did not do so, turning and fired at the officers instead, and Agent Buzzi shot him.

Disposition of the case: County Attorney of Tulsa County refused to file charges against the agent, saying no action was necessary, as the shooting of Cash was justified.

Jess Coffey

Facts of the case: On March 28, 1923, Prohibition Agent Benjamin H. Crumpton, accompanied by some sheriffs, raided an illicit distillery near Muscadine, Ala., operated by Jess Coffey. Coffey attempted to escape and Crumpton fired to his right trying to stop him. As he fired his foot slipped causing the gun to swerve to the left and as a result Coffey was shot and later died.

Disposition of the case: Crumpton was indicted by grand jury of Cleburne County for murder; November 6, 1924, was tried and acquitted.

Zategosa de Leon

Facts of the case: On May 16, 1923, Prohibition Agent Charles E. Miller, accompanied by another officer, investigated the premises of 128 Guilbeau Street, San Antonio, Tex., the home of Zategosa de Leon, a notorious bootlegger. Agent Miller was attacked by De Leon with a knife and cut in several places. De Leon instructed his two sons to get a pistol. Miller could not get away from De Leon who was following him and striking him with the knife, and fearing for his life he drew a pistol, shot De Leon and killed him. Cuts in Miller's clothing and papers indicate that De Leon attempted to stab him in the heart. A 40-gallon still, five 50-gallon barrels of peach mash, a 50-gallon cooling barrel, and all the paraphernalia used in distilling intoxicating liquor were found.

Disposition of the case: Grand jury returned a "no bill" on July 27, 1923, thereby exonerating Agent Miller.

Douglas Dunham

Facts of the case: On the evening of October 14, 1922, Deputy Marshal C. G. Bryant, accompanied by Federal Prohibition Agents Cheatham, Moor, and Ratledge, went to Jake Brown's filling station near Salisbury, N. C., to serve a search warrant. When the officers arrived one Douglas Dunham was seen in the store in a bending position looking through the door at him. Dunham made a dash for a door opening into a rear room. Cheatham ran after him but Dunham slammed the door before Cheatham reached it, and bolted it on the inside. Cheatham, with his gun in his hand, forced the door open. The floor on the other side of the door was lower than the floor of the store, and as the door sprung open Cheatham fell down the step to his knees, throwing out his hands to stop his fall. When Givens delivered intoxicating liquor to Gay, as arranged previously, and after Givens had accepted pay for such liquor, Agent Gay informed him he was under arrest. Givens snatched a revolver from the pocket of a Mr. Bledsoe, who was assisting Agent Gay, and started chasing Gay around an automobile, saying he was going to kill him. Agent Gay dodged behind a tree and while Givens was trying to get a shot at him Gay shot Givens, killing him.

Arthur Hood, owner of the distilling plant, and three other operators composed the violating party. During the raid Hood shot Agent Shugart, the shot striking just below the heart and passing through the left lung. After being shot down by the moonshiner Agent Shugart returned fire, three times hitting Hood, and wounding him in such a way that he died on February 21, 1923. When ordered to stop the driver of the car deliberately ran down one of the officers, knocking him off a bridge and into a ditch, then hit another officer and knocked him down. Agent Gastley mounted the running board of the machine and the occupants began shooting at him. A pistol duel ensued and both occupants—J. B. Smith and Jett

Smith—of the car were killed. Fifty-six gallons of whisky were found in the car.

Albert L. Swope

Facts of the case: On September 25, 1922, several prohibition agents, including Sylvester E. Davis, raided the farm of James M. Byers near Shandon, Butler County, Ohio. On the farm they found a complete distilling plant and two men ran away from the still as the officers approached. One was caught although he resisted arrest and he refused to accompany the agents away from the farm in an automobile. While attempting to handcuff him he made a dive at Agent Davis, trying to get Davis's gun, which was in the holster, and in the ensuing struggle the gun was discharged, killing the moonshiner. It was ascertained he went by the several names of Andrew L., August L., and Albert L. Swope, and sometimes spelled his last name Schwab.

Wills, came to the hotel where Wills was staying at Irvine, Ky., and after cursing him and making threatening remarks, started shooting at Wills. Fredius Wilson

Facts of the case: On the evening of June 13, 1923, Prohibition Agents James C. Dilworth and Charles E. Miller met former Prohibition Agent Fredius Wilson on the street in Galveston, Tex., and Wilson accosted Dilworth, calling him a foul name and accused him of being responsible for certain men going to jail. Dilworth informed Wilson that he was not looking for trouble, and Wilson answered that he was, and he fired from the hip instantly, hitting Dilworth in the shoulder. The force of the shot caused Dilworth to stagger, and he reached for his gun, but being somewhat paralyzed he did not shoot. Wilson fired a second shot, and then Miller shot Wilson, killing him. Wilson had been dropped from the rolls for the good of the service, his work having been unsatisfactory. He had a great deal of trouble with other agents and officials, and his shooting was undoubtedly the result of personal animosity between him and the agents Dilworth and Miller.

Disposition of the case: On July 27, 1923, grand jury reported "no bill" against these agents.

Peter Yancaukas

Facts of the case: On April 27, 1923, Agent James L. Asher, with two other prohibition agents and a deputy sheriff, went to a saloon at Tenth and Winter Streets, Philadelphia, to identify prisoners wanted and serve a search warrant, a purchase of whisky having been made in such saloon on a previous date. When the agents entered Mrs. Peter Yancaukas, the wife of the saloon keeper, was serving whisky out of a pitcher. The agents tried to get possession of the pitcher and a fight ensued, in which the agents were assaulted with bottles and other articles. Agent Asher tried to arrest Peter Yancaukas, but he resisted. It is alleged that Asher kicked Yancaukas in the stomach and that Yancaukas later died as a result thereof. Asher denies this, stating that the only thing he did was to hit Yancaukas with his fist under the chin when Yancaukas was about to hit another agent with a quart soda-water bottle. He further states that Yancaukas while under bond called at the prohibition office three times, at which times he seemed in the best of health.

As the agent and his companions approached the house Dysart and his wife appeared in the door armed with revolvers. Agent Saylor replied he would deliver the prisoner to a Federal prohibition agent of Virginia for trial in that State, whereupon Bill Littrell fired at Agent Saylor; a fight followed in which Lloyd and John Littrell and Agent Saylor were wounded, and Bill Littrell was killed. One, Ralph Marchese, apparently a friend of Bucaro's, sneaked up behind Agent Collins and was close to him, and Agent Murtagh, thinking Marchese had a gun and intended to use it on Collins, fired at him. At the same time Bucaro fired at Agent Collins, and one of the bullets struck Marchese, and he died soon after being taken to the hospital. Both revolvers were of the same caliber and it could not be determined who fired the fatal shot.

The man threw the pint of liquor into the river and started to run in the direction of the river, and Sheriff Foster and Agent Simmons both fired one shot, not with the intention of shooting the man, who ran into the edge and the river, then came back and threw up his hands and laid down on the ground, saying he was shot. He was rushed to a hospital where he died two hours after the shooting. The man who was shot was learned to be Guy Meadows.

Thomas Monteforti said he would shoot and pulled a pistol from his hip pocket and was in the act of drawing when Kupferman shot and the bullet entered Monteforti's cheek just below the eye, mortally wounding him. Just at that time two other shots were fired either by Michael Monteforti or Fisher. Kupferman turned to defend himself from these men and wounded Michael Monteforti. Fisher escaped. Kupferman admitted doing the shooting, and as Agent Owens's pistol was in evidence with its chambers full he was not held.

Disposition of the case: Grand jury of Cadde Parish, La., ignored the charge.

Ernest Twombly

Facts of the case: On April 11, 1924, Prohibition Agent William H. The officers in self-defense all fired at Brown, who at the same time fired with his shotgun. Brown then ran for a barricade in some near-by rocks, where he collapsed and died, death having resulted from one revolver wound.

After the still had been set up, Agent Griffin ordered one of the men to throw up his hands. The man, seeing Griffin was alone, started toward him and put his hand in his pocket. Agent Griffin, believing that he was reaching for a revolver, fired and shot him. The second man escaped. The wounded man, who it was ascertained was John Kelly, died before medical attention could be given him.

Filmore Sexton

Facts of the case: On November 6, 1924, Prohibition Agent Irwin, accompanied by a number of county officers, was searching for a still said to be operated by one Filmore Sexton near Huntsville, Scott County, Tenn. Upon the approach of the officers to the home of Filmore Sexton a number of men near the house began firing at the officers with high-powered rifles. As the officers had no guns except pistols, they were obliged to leave the place. The officers returned with rifles and with an additional number of county officers. The men at Filmore Sexton's place again fired on the officers. The officers returned the fire. During the firing Filmore Sexton was killed. A still in full operation was found adjacent to the house.

Disposition of the case: In view of the fact that the officers were fired on by the operators of the still, who were all desperate characters, and consequently were obliged to shoot in self-defense, no prosecution on the charge of homicide was instituted against the officers.

When the officers approached the home of Sneed he offered no resistance. A search of the house was made, which failed to disclose any liquor. However, the officers then went to a near-by house and, when attempting to gain entrance, Sneed left the officers without any warning, killing Agent Day. He then fired at Agent Taylor, who returned the fire, wounding Sneed. State officers came to the assistance of Agent Taylor, and during an exchange of shots Sneed was instantly killed.

Disposition of the case: In view of the fact that the officers concerned were obliged in self-defense to shoot Sneed, who had already

Carl Thernes

Facts of the case: On March 26, 1925, Prohibition Agent Tucker, accompanied by two local officers, went to a farm where it was believed a still was being operated, 6 miles from Britton, Okla. Upon arrival at the place the officers found one Albert Berry and one Carl Thernes operating two stills. After the moonshiners were placed under arrest, Thernes started to run away, at the same time stooping over to pick up what was believed to be a revolver. Agent Tucker, believing that Thernes intended to fire at him from the near-by bushes, shot and killed him.

Disposition of the case: On March 28, 1925, a coroner's jury found that the shooting was justifiable homicide and recommended that no prosecution be instituted against Agent Tucker.

Bill Tilghman

Facts of the case: On November 1, 1924, Prohibition Agent Lynn attempted to search the Murphy dance hall at Cromwell, Okla., to ascertain if intoxicating liquors were sold there. Before he could enter the dance hall he was accosted by one Bill Tilghman, who grabbed hold of Lynn and told him he would kill him. Van Sickle, an alleged bootlegger, at Laramie, Wyo. When the officers requested admission to the house Van Sickle fired on the officer accompanying Agent Curry. Agent Curry then went to the assistance of the State officer and Van Sickle fired on him. The bullet passed through his clothing and inflicted a slight wound. Agent Curry then in defense of himself and the other officer fired and fatally wounded Van Sickle, who died as a result of his wounds the following day.

Lawrence Wenger

Facts of the case: On November 19, 1924, Prohibition Agents Barton, Ely, Ford, and Stevens were searching for a still near Madonna, Md. They found what appeared to be a still in the process of construction. The agents then placed themselves in hiding near the still to see if anyone would approach the place. After some time a man came to the place. Upon ascertaining the presence of the agents he fled. The agents pursued him, firing their revolvers in the air in an effort to stop him. However, he escaped from them. A short time later, when leaving the place, they found the man who had fled, who was ascertained to be one Lawrence Wenger, lying dead from revolver wound.

Disposition of the case: Agents Barton, Ely, Ford, and Stevens were indicted by the Harford County grand jury, February term, 1925, on the charge of manslaughter. Agents acquitted March 6, 1927, in Federal court, Baltimore, Md.

Colt gave chase to one Adam Ballinger on the Asheville and Greenville Highway, North Carolina, in apprehending rum runners. The officers demanded twice that the car stop, stating they were Federal officers. Ballinger was driving a Ford roadster and he turned into the Lake Summit Road where he began shooting. One shot went through Grant's hat and the right headlight of the agent's car was hit. The agents returned the fire in self-defense. About 3 miles farther on Ballinger jumped from his car and ran. A search was made but he could not be found. Seven gallons of whiskey was found in his car. On July 27, Ballinger's brother reported that he had not returned home. Another search was made and his body was found about 150 or 200 yards from the car.

John Buongore

Facts of the case: On August 1, 1925, Prohibition Agent Joseph A. Furbushaw arrested John Buongore in Havre de Grace, Md., for bootlegging. Furbushaw alleged that Buongore reached for his hip pocket and he believed he was reaching for a gun and he shot in self-defense, killing Buongore immediately.

When the agents and deputy sheriff approached the still Joseph Carter saw them, and when Agent Epley told him they were officers and to put up his hands, Carter started toward the mash barrels, where a rake handle was protruding, which resembled a gun. Agent Epley commanded him a second time to put up his hands, and when he refused to do so and continued toward the barrels, Agent Epley shot him in the right leg. Carter walked to the car which carried him to the hospital, and it was a great surprise to everybody when he died four days later, April 5, 1926.

Disposition of the case: At coroner's inquest the jury returned a verdict of "justifiable homicide." No criminal proceedings instituted.

John Danley

Facts of the case: On April 29, 1926, Prohibition Agents L. F. McGlothlin and C. A. Hood, with State Prohibition Agent T. M. Graveley and County Officer W. H. Vane, raided a still near Falls Mills, Tazewell County, Va. The still was located in a hollow and the officers separated. Agents McGlothlin and Hood walked to the top of the ridge, and just as they started down into the hollow they heard two shots. Thinking this was signal from the others, they started in the direction from which the shots came. They met Graveley and asked him if he had his man and he said he had. They found Vane standing near the still, and, on being questioned why he had rushed them so soon without the others having time to get to their places, he replied that the operators saw him first, and as soon as he saw some one running from the still he fired two shots. They destroyed the still, and on investigating a noise found a boy, John Danley, lying wounded about 300 to 400 yards from the still. He was rushed to a hospital, but he died before reaching it.

The man was found to be one Stephen Kobalski.

Disposition of the case: An information was filed March 30, 1926, charging Agent Pierce with manslaughter. "No bill" returned November, 1927, term.

Henry Nestor

Facts of the case: On September 5, 1925, Prohibition Agents Rodman Russell, O. B. Wells, and J. M. Wood raided a camp on the Ohio River near Ludlow, Ky., and arrested Robert Venn, Jerome O'Leary, Volley Soards, and Henry Nestor. Agent Wood had his pistol in his hand pointed at the ground and not at the man. Agent Russell left the camp to telephone for the patrol, leaving Agents Wells and Wood in charge. Henry Nestor struck Agent Wood in the back, knocking him down and falling on top of him. While on the ground, Nestor attacked Agent Wood, kicking him several times on the leg and attempting to secure possession of Agent Wood's pistol. Agent Wood fired a shot which penetrated Nestor's chest. Nestor again attempted to secure the pistol and Agent Wood shot him in the left temple causing death.

Disposition of the case: Coroner rendered a verdict that Agent Wood was justified in killing Henry Nestor in self-defense. The Kenton County grand jury at October term heard testimony of 10 or 12 men who had seen what occurred at the killing and rendered a verdict that Henry Nestor was shot in self-defense.

William Risk

Facts of the case: On August 14, 1925, Prohibition Agents Giles, Mitchell, Funstan, Gibbs, and Deputy Sheriff R. W. Jackson raided a still located north of Divide, Teller County, Colo. About an hour after their arrival W. M. Williams came to the still and was placed under arrest and despatched to Colorado Springs with Agent Gibbs and Deputy Sheriff Jackson. Later in the evening William Risk and N. W. Calmes came to the still. Calmes was taken into custody by Agents Mitchell and Funstan. They heard Giles order Risk to drop his gun. Agent Funstan ran to Giles's assistance. A shot was fired, Giles says, by Risk. Agent Funstan saw Risk backing into a clump of aspens and fired at him and a third shot was fired by Agent Giles. The agents at all times called on Risk to drop his gun. Risk fell fatally wounded and died within a short time.

Disposition of the case: A coroner's inquest was held August 15, 1925, and its verdict was that William Risk "came to his death from a gunshot wound at the hands of a Federal prohibition officer in the discharge of his duty."

Frank Sears

Facts of the case: At 3.30 in the afternoon of August 21, 1925, Prohibition Agent Roy V. Miller, Deputy Clarence Gossett, R. S. Young, and J. S. Fox went to the premises of Frank Sears, near Daniel Boone, Hopkins County, Ky., for the purpose of searching for stills. Sears and a girl, Mable Stanley, were there and Sears made no objection to the proposed search until he saw R. S. Young, from whom he had stolen some goods. He sprang to his feet and ran about 20 steps, drawing a revolver from his clothing and putting the barrel of the revolver over his left arm. Gossett immediately fired five or six shots and Agent Miller, hearing them, turned and fired one. Sears fell to the ground. He was taken to Hopkins County Hospital, Madisonville, Ky., and died August 21, 1925.

Disposition of the case: Indicted October 12, 1925, by grand jury of Hopkins County charged with manslaughter. Indictment dismissed at April, 1928, term of court at Paducah.

Homer Studivant

Facts of the case: About noon, February 15, 1926, Agents Epley, Ryals, and Cooke were about 9 miles northwest of Jacksonville, Duval County, Fla., searching for stills. Agents Epley and Ryals saw a truck come to the edge of the swamp and three negroes got out, changed their clothes, and put up hip boots, and carrying two 5-gallon jugs and some wood, entered the swamp. The agents saw the smoke from the still and when within a short distance therefrom Agent Epley shouted that they were revenue men and to put up their hands. Albert McNair threw up his hands but Homer Studivant put his hand into his sweater and turned around several times to locate the sound. Both agents thought Studivant was armed and fired at the ground near him. He fell to the ground and the agents went to him immediately and discovered he had been shot in the hip. He was taken to the hospital at Jacksonville where he died the morning of February 16, 1926.

Disposition of the case: The coroner's jury made no findings as to the identity of the officer who fired the shot, but found that the agents in killing the deceased acted in the performance of their official duties.

Ronde Wade

Facts of the case: On April 17, 1926, Prohibition Agent G. C. Henson and Deputy Sheriff J. T. Alderson went to Burvin Turner's place at Owensboro, Ky., to purchase some evidence. Alderson bought one-half pint of white whisky from Burvin Turner, and G. C. Henson immediately stepped between Burvin Turner and the door leading outside and presenting his United States badge said, "Do you know that you have sold whisky to a prohibition agent?" Turner sprang forward and clinched Alderson, forcing him to the wall, searching his hip pockets, and holding his arms down on each side with his hands in his coat pockets. Alderson states he drew his pistol from his right coat pocket, believing he was in great danger of bodily harm, and fired at Turner to release and protect himself. At the same time he saw Ronde Wade pointing a revolver at Agent Henson, while Henson had his hands up and open. He states he shot Wade to save Henson's life. Wade dropped the pistol and walked out of the house to his automobile, which was parked on the opposite side of the street, fell at the side of the car, and died a few minutes later. Turner was removed to the Owensboro Hospital.

Disposition of the case: Grand jury failed to indict Agent Henson, but indicted Alderson June 22, 1926. Accordingly the case is closed so far as the prohibition agent is concerned. Verdict of not guilty as to Alderson returned May 8, 1928.

J. B. Walling

Facts of the case: On February 4, 1926, Prohibition Agents Bee Cowen and Stewart G. Davis raided an illicit still at Bunns Bluff,

Orange County, Tex. Agent Cowen observed a white man and two colored men near the still. He called to them and ordered them not to move. One negro jumped toward some guns leaning against a tree, and Cowen shot, intending to put the bullet between the negro and the tree. The bullet struck the tree and inflicted a wound in the chest of J. B. Walling, who was standing or leaning against the tree. The tree had shielded Walling from Cowen's view.

Disposition of the case: Agent Cowen was arrested February 8, 1926, charged with murder. The grand jury, Orange County, Tex., failed to indict, April 26, 1926.

Elvin Wilson

Facts of the case: At 1 p. m., September 14, 1925, Prohibition Agents Roy W. Easley, Guy Tuggle, W. C. Thompson, Albert Ransdell, and Edward Statton went to Mount Sterling, Ky., and obtained guides to take them to three moonshine stills. Agents B. F. Unthank and W. C. White joined them at 10 p. m., and the guides took them to a still about 250 yards from Elvin Wilson's home. The agents proceeded to Wilson's home to arrest him. On the way they discovered 35 gallons of whisky in smokehouse. The agents surrounded the house and stated they were Federal prohibition agents. The father of Wilson let them in and both he and Wilson's wife stated he was not there. As they looked into a dark room Wilson shot, just missing Agent Thompson, who fired one shot. Agent Easley also fired a shot. Wilson fell to the floor, fatally wounded, and died within a few minutes.

Disposition of the case: Agents were taken before a county judge and exonerated. Later the matter was investigated by a grand jury of Bath County, Ky., which grand jury failed to render a true bill.

J. A. Brinson

Facts of the case: On August 5, 1926, Prohibition Agents W. M. Simmons, C. F. Standau, A. C. Givhan, and J. H. Shirley were returning to Miami, Fla., in two automobiles after having investigated certain stills in that section. When near Homestead a car came up from the rear and occupants of the car fired into the rear car occupied by the agents. The car in which the attacking party rode and the car occupied by the agents came to a stop close together. The firing from the attacking party continued at this point, and in self-defense the agents returned the fire, killing three members of the attacking party, J. A. Brinson, M. P. Merritt, and Clyde Parrish.

Disposition of the case: On August 9, 1926, the coroner's jury returned a verdict that the deceased came to their death "at the hands of Federal prohibition agents in pursuit of their duty" and "justifiable homicide." The State attorney dropped prosecution of the agents.

Algie Carrier

Facts of the case: On January 6, 1927, Prohibition Agents Pat M. Needham and John Elliot accompanied by several county officers raided a moonshine still near Amite, La. When the officers approached the still they took into custody one man, and arriving at the site of the still they found another man, one Algie Carrier. Carrier attempted to escape from the officers and jumped over a small stream of water. Upon reaching the bank opposite to the officers who were pursuing him he drew a revolver, and in self-defense the officers fired at him, killing him instantly. It was ascertained that death resulted from shotgun wounds. Inasmuch as Agent Elliot and two county officers were armed with shotguns and fired at Carrier, it was not possible to definitely ascertain who had fired the fatal shot. Carrier had a reputation for being a dangerous character, and at the time of his death was a deserter from the United States Navy and was wanted by the authorities for alleged arson.

Lawton Carroll

Facts of the case: On March 7, 1927, about 5 a. m., Prohibition Agent R. L. Hudson, sr., of Valdosta, Ga., with his son, R. L. Hudson, jr., aged 17, and V. N. Hall, aged 20, son of the deputy sheriff of Lowndes County, went out on Lock Laurel public road to search and seize the car of Lawton Carroll (known to be implicated in liquor operations), having previously been informed that he would come over that road early the morning of March 7. When Carroll passed in his Ford roadster, Hudson, sr., recognized him, and, turning their car about, the Hudsons and Hall gave chase, overtaking him, called to him to stop. Instead, however, he continued his tortuous flight through the outskirts of the city of Valdosta, the Hudsons and Hall following. Young Hudson was standing on the running board of their car and fired three shots. The first two of them were seen to strike the ground in the rear of Carroll's car. However, a sudden lurch of their car caused the third shot to go wild, and it is presumed that this shot inflicted the fatal wound. Carroll was found speechless in his car a mile and a half farther on. He was taken to a hospital in Valdosta, where he died March 26, 1927. Two 1-gallon glass jugs of colored whisky were found in his car, and two had been thrown from the car after the shooting.

Disposition of the case: The Hudsons were committed to jail on a charge of murder and the case transferred to Federal court. Case to be heard September 19, 1927. (Agent Hudson resigned June 15, 1927.) Hall was discharged. Case against Hudson continued by order of court April, 1928. Both of the Hudsons were acquitted October, 1928.

F. M. Ferguson

Facts of the case: On October 25, 1926, Prohibition Agent Mack B. Lilly was patrolling the Piedmont Road, Huntington, W. Va., when one Earl Best, a well-known bootlegger, passed him in an automobile at a high rate of speed. Agent Lilly pursued the violator in his car, and while attempting to pass a truck his automobile struck and fatally injured one F. M. Ferguson, who was crossing the road at that point. The accident occurred at approximately 6 p. m., after darkness had set in, and it was made further unavoidable, due to the fact that it was not possible to see Ferguson until it was too late to stop the automobile. It was stated that Agent Lilly bears the reputation of being a careful and expert driver. Ferguson died October 26, 1926, as a result of his injury.

Disposition of the case: Agent Lilly's first trial resulted in a "hung jury." Convicted at second trial on charge of involuntary manslaughter. Fined October 3, 1927, $100 and costs of both trials. Case appealed. November 8, United States Court of Appeals reversed the decision of the lower court and ordered a new trial for Agent Lilly.

Oliver Gill

Facts of the case: On April 2, 1927, Agents Wright and Edgar J. Jones and A. S. Campbell left Clarksdale and went to Lake View, Miss., to investigate a still anonymously reported to be owned and operated by John Kirkman and Oliver Gill. After getting past three negro look-outs and wading a branch, they were within 10 or 15 feet of the still. They commanded all the men to surrender and throw up their hands. Three of the white men, George Henry Williams, R. L. English, and Mike Lombardy, surrendered; the other white man, Oliver Gill, attempted to make his escape by running. Agent Jones pursued him for about 50 yards, rapidly gaining on him, at which time Gill, the moonshiner, seeing that Jones was about to overtake him, attempted to shoot Agent Jones with a pistol, at which time Jones fired on him with a shotgun, two bullets taking effect in the right side. Gill fell on the spot and lived only a short time, 10 or 15 minutes. Gill was a notorious moonshiner, and at the time of his death was under an injunction bond of $500.

Disposition of the case: Agent Jones indicted May 15, 1927, in State court. Quashed April 18, 1928, upon motion of United States attorney.

Lewis Gregory

Facts of the case: On November 7, 1926, Prohibition Agent W. B. Stone, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Thompson Cornwell and one J. E. Russell, searched the premises of Alex and Lewis Gregory near Graveltown, Ky., where a quantity of liquor was found. The officers came upon Lewis Gregory on the road near his home, and when the officers attempted to place him under arrest he resisted them and hit Agent Stone with rocks. In self-defense Agent Stone shot and wounded Gregory, the shot taking effect in his leg. Loss of blood due to the wound resulted in Gregory's death within a short time.

James Thomas Hall

Facts of the case: On May 5, 1927, Prohibition Agent W. H. Gillespie went, at the request of Sheriff W. C. Holbrook, of Elmore County, Ala., to assist him in a raid on a still located about 12 miles west of Tallassee and 12 miles east of Wetumpka, Ala. They were accompanied by State Officer H. L. Nelson and Chief Deputy Sheriff A. W. Varner. Arriving early at the side of the still, they concealed themselves and waited for the operators to arrive. James Thomas Hall and Arthur Oliver arrived about 5.30 a. m. and started operations. Oliver was carrying a Winchester pump shotgun. The officers surrounded the still and waited until about 9 o'clock to close in on them. Sheriff Holbrook was discovered when about 30 feet from the still. He commanded them to surrender. Oliver grabbed up the Winchester and fired. Holbrook fired at Oliver, part of the load striking him on the left side of his face. With the other operators he then started to run. Officer Nelson commanded them to halt and commanded Oliver to drop his gun; at the same time Nelson fired at him, striking him in the chest. Hall who was directly behind Oliver was fatally wounded, though it is not positively known who fired the fatal shot. James Thomas Hall died on the way to Wetumpka, Ala. Oliver was rushed to a hospital in Montgomery, Ala., where his condition was pronounced serious. Herbert Hall was placed in jail at Wetumpka, Ala.

Disposition of the case: It is the information of this office that this is a closed incident and there will be no prosecution of the officers in the State court.

Wade Hampton

Facts of the case: On the night of September 25, 1926, Prohibition Agents A. G. Sutterfield and P. T. Graves, accompanied by several local officers, entered a negro dance hall near Chestang Station, Mobile County, Ala., for the purpose of searching the place for liquor. During the search a negro was seen to leave the hall and stand outside a window, acting in a suspicious manner. Agent Sutterfield approached him and attempted to search him. The negro, one Wade Hampton, pulled a revolver and fired at the agent. In self-defense, the agent returned the fire, killing him instantly.

Disposition of the case: The matter was presented before a grand jury of Mobile County, which body did not return an indictment, thereby exonerating Agent Sutterfield.

J. J. Howard

Facts of the case: On March 18, 1927, Agent W. S. Newman, acting upon information of under-cover operatives, went to a point 4 or 5 miles west of Canton, Madison County, Miss., where the delivery of 10 gallons of whisky was to be made by one J. J. Howard, a notorious bootlegger, whom the county sheriff was anxious should be apprehended. Shortly after Newman's arrival Howard came up in an automobile. He alighted and came around to the car in which Agent Newman sat, placed a shotgun beside the car and a revolver was in scabbard in plain view on his person. He offered a pint of whisky as a sample, stating that he had moved his still over the Madison County line. Agent Newman got out of the car and covered Howard with his revolver, showing him his badge and stating that he was a Government officer and that he was under arrest. Howard refused to submit to arrest and in a fraction of a second had drawn his pistol and attempted to fire on Agent Newman. At the same time Agent Newman fired, the bullet taking effect just above the collar bone. Three other shots were fired entering Howard's chest. Howard was instantly killed. The examining physician stated that the first shot was fatal.

Disposition of the case: Agent Newman was exonerated by a coroner's jury, as he shot purely in self-defense.

E. P. Ingmire

Facts of the case: On April 7, 1927, Agent George H. Hudson and Informant Farley were detailed on duty at San Pedro, Calif. Agent Hudson was not familiar with the roads, but Informant Farley was, so he was assigned to drive the car. Farley had been working around in this vicinity and had developed a number of "leads," which was desirable to close up. At 12.55 on the morning of April 7, 1927, continuing these investigations, Agent Hudson, accompanied by three marines, Farley (who was driving the car), and a Mrs. McAggister, riding on the seat with Farley, had a slight collision with a Ford coupé at a point on the San Pedro-Wilmington paved highway, near the Union Oil Co. office and plant. A tire on the Ford coupé blew out, attracting some attention, and immediately after the Government car started it struck a Dodge touring car in which were a Mr. E. P. Ingmire and wife, of San Pedro, Calif. Mr. Ingmire was killed and his wife seriously injured.

Disposition of the case: Grand jury of the county indicted Hudson and Farley and the other occupants of the car on a charge of first-degree murder; Farley held without bond, Hudson on a bond of $25,000. Farley plead guilty involuntary manslaughter September 14, up for sentence September 19, 1927. Farley sentenced to a period of from one year to life in San Quentin prison. Case against Hudson dismissed in Federal court at Los Angeles September 7, 1927.

Millard Jamerson

Facts of the case: On the morning of June 15, 1927, at 2 a. m., Prohibition Agent W. H. Wright, Deputy Sheriff Elzie Carr, and Jack Ballard made the second trip to a still in operation about 3 miles east of Troy, Pontotoc County, Miss. About 50 yards from the still they stopped and listened, and in a few moments heard a great deal of talking at the still. The officers concealed themselves about 30 steps from the still and there remained for some time. Five men were at work at the still. As daylight approached the officers rushed the still. Carr at the left, Ballard at the right, and Agent Wright to enter at the center. Crossing an open space the moonshiners discovered the officers coming, and some of them fled, disregarding the command of the officers to halt. Millard Jamerson turned a 32-20 special Smith & Wesson pistol in his hand and attempted to fire at Agent Wright, at which time Wright fired on him with a 32-38 Winchester rifle, striking him on the right temple, the bullet coming out on the opposite side of his head, killing Jamerson instantly. John Lee Coleburn and J. T. Ernest were wounded and Reese Coleburn made his escape. It was found that the killing took place in Chickasaw County, just about 100 yards from Lee County line.

Disposition of the case: Case removed from State to Federal court. Agent Wright gave bond for appearance before Federal grand jury at Aberdeen, Miss., first Monday in October, 1927. No action taken by Federal grand jury.

Thomas Johnson

Facts of the case: On March 4, 1927, Eugene S. Forsythe, a customs border inspector and prohibition agent, in company with Deputy United States Marshal S. A. Johnson, left Pensacola, Fla., about 1 p. m. for the purpose of raiding a still in a swamp near Eleven Mile Creek. A mile from the still the car bogged and they got out and walked. A man standing near a small fire ran toward the still as soon as he saw the officers. Agent Forsythe pursued him. On approaching the still, two other men started running through the swamp. Forsythe fired his gun once to let Johnson know the still had been found and continued pursuing the two men who had been at the still. After running about a quarter of a mile the men split, one running to the left, the other to the right. Forsythe followed the one who turned to the right, and a short distance ahead, the man, Thomas Johnson, plunged into a creek. Forsythe had fired his gun twice in the air. Upon reaching the bank of the creek Forsythe called to the man to come back. At the second call he said he would. As he swam toward Forsythe he sank. Forsythe made an effort to save the man, almost being overcome by the cold himself. He was not successful, and came to the conclusion that the man had drowned.

Disposition of the case: At the coroner's inquest Forsythe was acquitted, but upon his return to Escambia County, Johnson's father swore out a warrant charging him with manslaughter. He was arrested and placed under $1,000 bond. Not yet had his preliminary hearing, March 22, 1927. April 17, 1928, evidence thought to be insufficient upon which to present such a charge.

Walter Lorange

Facts of the case: On the morning of June 23, 1927, Agents Clay Conaster and W. B. Stone, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff J. C. Walker and Sheriff S. D. Holmes, made a raid in Coffee County, Tenn., about 12 miles from Manchester, Tenn. The still was located about 5 a. m., and the officers soon saw two men working at the still. Agent Conaster rushed the still and commanded the men to surrender. Instead of complying they started to run and Agents Stone and Conaster gave chase. As the agents gained on the fleeing men one of them, Walter Lorange, turned on them with an open knife in his hand, refusing to halt and swearing and threatening to fight it out. Several shots were fired, and as Agent Stone came nearer Lorange he stumbled and fell. Lorange started toward Stone, but one of the shots had pierced Lorange's breast, killing him instantly. W. E. Stacey, the other violator, was captured by Sheriff Holmes. Lorange was known as a desperate character and had openly made threats to fight if any officers attempted to arrest him.

Disposition of the case: Preliminary hearing set for July 16, 1927, at Manchester, and if the agents are indicted in State court, the case will be removed to Federal court. August 22, 1928, jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

Cecil McClure

Facts of the case: On July 21, 1926, Prohibition Agents J. C. Crisp and Charles Branton, accompanied by a deputy United States marshal, proceeded to Tomotla, Cherokee County, N. C., to search the premises occupied by a family named McClure, alleged moonshiners. While engaged in the search of the premises, Cecil McClure and Charles McClure attempted to carry off the whisky that had been found on the premises by the officers. When prevented from doing this, they rushed into the house, where Cecil McClure obtained a shotgun and pursued Agent Crisp to the front of the house, where he drew the gun on the agent. The agent, in self-defense, fired at McClure, killing him instantly.

Disposition of the case: Agent J. C. Crisp was indicted July 21, 1926, on the charge of murder. The case was transferred from the State to Federal court. Acquitted November 28, 1927, by Federal grand jury at Asheville, N. C.

M. P. Merritt

Facts of the case: On August 5, 1926, Prohibition Agents W. M. Simmons, C. F. Standau, A. C. Givhan, and J. H. Shirley were returning to Miami, Fla., in two automobiles after having investigated certain stills in that section. When near Homestead a car came up from the rear and occupants of the car fired into the rear car occupied by the agents. The car in which the attacking party rode and the car occupied by the agents came to a stop close together. The firing from the attacking party continued at this point, and in self-defense the agents returned the fire, killing three members of the attacking party, M. P. Merritt, Clyde Parrish, and J. A. Brinson.

Disposition of the case: On August 9, 1926, the coroner's jury returned a verdict that the deceased came to their deaths "at the hands of Federal prohibition agents in pursuit of their duty" and "justifiable homicide."

Burrell Morris

Facts of the case: On November 23, 1926, Agent George H. Wentworth, accompanied by Agent D. D. Magnan, arrested Burrell Morris in the act of delivering a load of liquor in Berkeley, Calif. They started for the police station in the agent's car, with Agent Wentworth driving and Morris seated between him and Agent Magnan. After going some distance Morris placed his gun at Wentworth's side and commanded him to stop the car. When Wentworth did not comply Morris shot him through the side. Morris then grappled with Agent Magnan and during the scuffle the car was stopped and all got out. Although wounded, Agent Wentworth pulled his gun and shot Morris through the heart, killing him almost instantly. Agent Wentworth was fatally wounded and died the next morning.

Disposition of the case: The coroner's jury found that Morris died from a wound in the heart, inflicted by a Federal prohibition agent, who himself was killed, in the performance of his official duties.

William Niedermeier

Facts of the case: On December 3, 1926, Prohibition Agents Ernest L. Benway and George R. Pratt were assigned to patrol work in the vicinity of Silver Creek and Huron River, Mich. While watching the course used by smugglers a motor boat came into view which appeared to contain kegs of beer. The boat was hailed and told to come in. Two men in the boat failed to pay attention to the officers and Agent Benway then fired across the bow of the boat three times. After the third shot one of the occupants of the boat, who was ascertained to be one Crooks, shut the motor off and advised that they would come in. Crooks then called to the other man in the boat, who it was afterwards learned was Niedermeier, to hand him one of the guns that were visible in the front part of the boat. Niedermeier made a motion as if to reach the guns back to Crooks. At the same time Crooks leaned forward as if to receive the guns. These actions caused Agents Benway and Pratt to anticipate that Crooks was going to fire upon them; therefore they fired at the boat simultaneously, resulting in Niedermeier being hit and fatally wounded. He was taken to a hospital where he died December 21, 1926.

Disposition of the case: Benway and Pratt arrested December 24, 1926. March 30, 1927, Pratt was dismissed by the court. Benway found guilty of assault and battery, sentenced to six months to three years with recommendation for the minimum term. District attorney's office requesting authority of Attorney General to appeal case. Agent still under suspension August 6, 1927, awaiting outcome of appeal of case. Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed conviction of Agent Benway May 16, 1928.

Clyde Parrish

Facts of the case: On August 5, 1926, Prohibition Agents W. M. Simmons, C. F. Standan, A. C. Givhan, and J. H. Shirley were returning to Miami, Fla., in two automobiles after having investigated certain stills in that section. When near Homestead a car came up from the rear and occupants of the car fired into the rear car occupied by the agents. The car in which the attacking party rode and the car occupied by the agents came to a stop close together. The firing from the attacking party continued at this point, and in self-defense, the agents returned the fire, killing three members of the attacking party, M. P. Merritt, Clyde Parrish, and J. A. Brinson.

Disposition of the case: On August 9, 1926, the coroner's jury returned a verdict that the deceased came to their deaths "at the hands of Federal prohibition agents in pursuit of their duty," and "justifiable homicide." The State attorney dropped prosecution of the agents.

Jeff Pitts

Facts of the case: On September 23, 1926, Prohibition Agent W. S. Newman, accompanied by several local officers, proceeded to raid a still near Wesson, Miss. The still was surrounded by the officers. The officers commanded two men, who were found at the still, to hold up their hands, but instead of complying they attempted to run away. Agent Newman fired and fatally wounded one of the men, ascertained to be Jeff Pitts, who died soon after he was removed to the hospital. Both Jeff Pitts and Oliver G. Waldrop, who was with him at the still, bear the reputation of being notorious moonshiners.

Disposition of the case: No prosecution (criminal) instituted.

Alex Tidwell

Facts of the case: On May 26, 1927, Agents O. H. Warren and G. P. Armour left Jackson, Tenn., accompanied by Sheriff J. O. Dixon and his deputy, R. B. Rinks, of Savannah, proceeded to a point in Hardin County about eight miles east, and destroyed a still there on the property of Jim Jerrold, sr. Jerrold was apprehended and taken to Savannah and given a hearing and released on bond. They then went to another point eight miles southeast in Hardin County, where they located another still. No one was there and after waiting a short time they seized and destroyed the still and continued their search for other stills in the same locality. As they were returning to the livery some one began shooting in the woods about 500 yards ahead of them, and in their best judgment at or near the still they had just destroyed. Going on to this point, found two white men at the still site; one escaped in the undergrowth, but Alex Tidwell did not run but walked away with a six-shooter in his hand. At the second call to halt, he turned to Sheriff Dixon and began shooting at him and at Agent Warren. Both Agents Warren and Armour shot at Tidwell once, and Warren wrested his gun, a 32-20 Colt six-shooter, from his hand. At the same time Tidwell showed that the shots were fatal, and died without saying anything. Sheriff Dixon looked after the body, the agents reporting the affair at the Memphis office. Tidwell had a reputation of being a dangerous character and a fugitive from justice for many years.

Disposition of the case: It appears that there will be no criminal prosecution against the agents.

Mack Turner

Facts of the case: On the afternoon of April 28, 1927, a raiding party, which consisted of Deputy Sheriff Felix Lee, Gus Dixon, chief of police of Prichard, Ala., and Prohibition Agents P. T. Graves and Harvey T. Hughes, proceeded to a point about 32 miles north of Mobile, in Mobile County, Ala., and 5 miles east of Gulf Breeze. A still had previously been located by Agents Sutterfield and Ford. The men in the party took up positions which would make it impossible for anyone to escape. Agent Sutterfield went near enough to hear talking and see three white men and one negro working at the still, Mack Turner, Eph Lewis, E. Newburn, and Robert Williams, the negro. Turner had a shotgun in his hand. When they finally sat down, Sutterfield rushed toward the still and commanded the operators to surrender in the name of the law. They did not heed, but started to run in different directions. Lewis and Newburn ran in the direction of Agent Hughes location and he captured both of them. Sutterfield fired two shots in the direction of the negro. Other shots were heard, probably fired by Agent Graves and Deputy Lee. The still was destroyed, prisoners taken into custody, and two days later news of finding Mack Turner dead in the location of the still was brought to the officers. It is not known just how Turner came to his death. Doctor Hale, the coroner of Mobile County found six bullet wounds in the body of Turner. It is thought neither Agent Graves or Hughes were so stationed as to have participated in the killing. Case is being investigated by the State grand jury and will be removed to Federal court if the officers are indicted.

Disposition of the case: "No bill" returned against Agent Graves by State grand jury.

Arnold Wise

Facts of the case: On the morning of April 29, 1927, having received information that a still was being operated at Horse Pen Cove, about 20 miles from Welch, McDowell County, W. Va., a party composed of Prohibition Agents Taylor and Dillow, of the sixth district, Prohibition Agent McGlothlin, of Virginia, State Prohibition Agent Watkins, and Sid and Will Bane, deputy sheriffs of Tazewell County, Va., proceeded to the vicinity of Horse Pen Cove. Upon their arrival they divided into two squads, Agent McGlothlin, Watkins, and one of the sheriffs forming one squad, and the remainder of the party the other. McGlothlin's squad found a trail which they followed leading them to a still in operation. They surrounded it and ordered the men to put up their hands. Arnold Wise, one of the operators, ran from the still pursued by one of the officers who commanded him to stop. The other man, whose name is Spriggs, complied with the request to put up his hands. McGlothlin states that he saw Wise draw a revolver and rest it on his left arm as though taking aim and at that time several shots were fired and Wise fell mortally wounded, from which wound he died in a short time.

Disposition of the case: No action taken.

Albert Edmunds

Facts of the case: On June 10, 1928, about 9.40 p. m., Prohibition Agent Grady Cobb of Columbus, Ga., and Policemen A. L. Carroll and D. C. Bland of Phenix City, Ala., went to the Huckaby Grocery Store at 311 Sixth Street, Phenix City, Ala., for the purpose of making an investigation. The back room of this building is used as a bar room where whisky is sold at all times. Albert Edmunds was in the front part of the store as the officers entered and called out a warning to those in the back room. The officers found two soldiers in civilian clothes in the back room. One of them was drinking whisky from a pint bottle. Agent Cobb took the bottle away from him, and told both the soldiers and Edmunds that they would have to come with him. While looking for a cork to put in the bottle, Edmunds grabbed the bottle from Agent Cobb and ran from the back room, pouring out the whisky as he ran. He then threw the bottle down and attempted to climb the high fence which incloses the premises. Agent Cobb caught him by the coat and pulled him back. In the encounter which ensued Cobb struck at Edmunds' head with his revolver, but in the darkness hit his shoulder and the gun was discharged by the impact. The bullet severed the jugular vein and Edmunds died while being taken to a local hospital.

Disposition of the case: Cobb was given a preliminary hearing June 14 and 15 at Phenix City, Ala., before Mayor Floyd of that city, who refused to release Agent Cobb on bond. He is confined in jail, at Seale, Ala., until the grand jury convenes about September 15, 1928. Indicted in State court for second-degree murder; case removed to Federal court in September, 1928.

Elmer Fulton

Facts of the case: On August 4, 1927, Agent Charles T. Warner, accompanied by O. T. Mason, J. C. Pane, Lon Wilson, and W. Haskins, went to Picher, Okla., to make a buy from W. Johnson and Elmer Fulton. Haskins, observed by Warner and Mason, purchased 2 half-pints of liquor which was put in his car, and Johnson offered to sell him all the liquor he wanted. Haskins said they would take 5 gallons, but would have to come back for it later. Johnson got his partner, Fulton, and proceeded to dig up five 1-gallon jugs of whisky which were concealed in a tilling pile back of Johnson's home. The jugs were put in two sacks, Johnson carrying one and Fulton the other. As they went to Haskins's car, Warner drove up and, jumping from his car, said, "Boys, you are under arrest, we are Federal officers," and went toward Fulton, who started to strike him with the sack containing the jugs of whisky. Warner said, "Boys, don't do that," and Fulton dropped the sack and ran. Warner gave chase, firing three shots in the ground. In going over an embankment he slipped in the mud and fell, his pistol being discharged as he did so. This shot hit Fulton in the left shoulder blade and passed out through the right breast. A doctor and an ambulance were called. Fulton died on the way to the hospital.

Disposition of the case: State prosecution in progress August 6, 1927. Released by United States court on application of habeas corpus proceedings August 29, 1927. Judge Kennamer discharged the agent October 21, 1921, saying the act was justifiable.

Charles P. Gundlach

Facts of the case: On September 16, 1927, Agents Dano M. Jackley, John T. Fisher, Robert F. Cornett, and Joseph R. Brewer proceeded to the farm of Charles P. Gundlach, about 8 miles from Leonardtown, Md., to make an investigation of a reported still and home-brew manufacturing plant. When the agents started toward the house to notify the occupants of their purpose, Gundlach came out of the house armed with a shotgun. He was told that they were Federal prohibition agents, and he replied: "I know who you are, and I don't give a ———." After telling Agent Fisher he was going to shoot him, he aimed with the shotgun and wounded Agent Fisher, and fired twice later with a revolver he had in his hip pocket. Agent Brewer then fired the shot that killed Gundlach.

Disposition of the case: Agent Brewer acquitted February 17, 1928. Cases against Jackley, Fisher, and Cornett nolle prossed.

Lee Prudman

Facts of the case: On or about January 9, 1928, Agents Charles F. Cooley and R. N. Wilson, assigned to the eastern district of Arkansas, raided a large distillery near Julius, Crittenden County, Ark. One white man and five negroes were operating the still. All escaped except Lee Prudman, negro, who had a shotgun and refused to surrender, and was killed. Coroner's jury rendered a verdict that Prudman came to his death by resisting officers attempting to arrest him.

Mike Soytick

Facts of the case: On May 10, 1928, Agent James C. Capen and his assistant, Percy Epperson, armed with a search warrant, went to the ranch of Mike Soytick, near Cumberland, Wyo. They found a still and destroyed it and then placed Soytick under arrest. Soytick asked permission to go into the house and get his coat and hat, and when he reappeared he had a rifle with which he shot Agent Capen through the abdomen. Epperson and Soytick then engaged in a duel, in which Epperson sent six shots into the body of Soytick. Epperson then placed Agent Capen and Soytick in Capen's car and took them to the hospital at Kemmerer, Wyo., but both men died just as the hospital was reached.

Disposition of the case: Epperson exonerated at Coroner's inquest.

Douglass Smith

Facts of the case: On or about 3 p. m., January 28, 1928, Agent George T. Griffin, armed with a search warrant and accompanied by Agent S. M. Statton and Investigator E. A. Larkin, called at the home of Douglass Smith, a colored man, living at 1506 Arthur Street, Louisville, Ky. Receiving no response to their knocks, though faces had been seen at the window, Investigator Larkin forced an entrance. Smith immediately drew a Luger pistol. Larkin protected himself by grabbing the pistol and turning the muzzle from the line of his person. In the struggle which ensued Larkin was knocked down by a blow from the pistol. Smith then fired at Larkin, but as Larkin was moving about on the floor, the bullet missed him and went through the floor. Agents Griffin and Statton gained entrance about this time and both opened fire—Statton firing one shot and Griffin two. It is assumed that Statton missed but that both of Griffin's shots took effect and resulted in Smith being killed. It was found, upon examination of Smith's body, that he was armed with an additional pistol, loaded, a 5-inch dirk knife, and two other large pocketknives.

Disposition of the case: Agents Griffin and Statton and Investigator Larkin were exonerated of the manslaughter charge on the ground of self-defense; trial held in Louisville, January, 1928.

Ben Bailey

Facts of the case: On August 31, 1928, during the afternoon Agents R. W. Graham and J. T. Wilson, accompanied by Deputy Marshal F. B. Lister, went to Florence County, S. C., to arrest a negro, Ben Bailey, who with three other negroes about August 17 had resisted arrest for having liquor in an automobile. They assaulted Marshal Lister and three of the negroes escaped, but Ben Bailey was recognized by Marshal Lister and Bailey's brother, John, was arrested at that time. It was in connection with this assault that the prohibition agents assisted Lister. The officers proceeded to Bailey's house and asked him to come out, informing him who they were and that they had a warrant for his arrest. Bailey dashed wildly about the house, and out a rear door. He ran down a road leading from the house and the agents gave chase. Agent Wilson fired a shot in the air to stop Bailey and as he did so he stumbled and fell. As Agent Graham approached, Bailey, with his hand in his pocket and swearing, was coming toward Agent Wilson, whereupon Agent Graham fired at Bailey fatally wounding him. Bailey died as the agents and deputy marshal were carrying him to a hospital.

Disposition of the case: A coroner's inquest was set for September 5, 1928.

Bernard Cottrell

Facts of the case: On July 20, 1928, Agents Ezra Zirkle, V. L. Skeen, and T. L. Cox left Charleston, W. Va., for Clendenin; there Constable Wells joined them and they proceeded to Little Blue Creek in Kanawha County, about 5 or 6 miles from Clendenin where some moonshine mash had been located the day previous. The agents reached the scene about 10.30 a. m. and saw two men operating a still. When about 20 steps away the men saw the agents and ran, the agents gave chase. In the chase five or six shots were fired, one striking Bernard Cottrell, one of the fleeing moonshiners. He fell on his face seriously wounded and lived but a short time—the agents and the other moonshiner, Opie Hershberger, doing all they could for the dying man. At the coroner's a bullet was extracted from Cottrell's back, which had been fired from a 32-30 caliber pistol. Agent T. L. Cox was the only one carrying a gun of that kind. Cox was arrested charged with murder and confined in the Kanawha County jail. A few days later he was released on $5,000 bail and bound over to the grand jury at the October term.

Disposition of the case: Agent Cox was acquitted December 20, 1928.

John Hysler

Facts of the case: During the afternoon of September 26, 1928, in response to a telephone call from Customs Inspector Pete Hopkins, Agents Hope King and Tim Eason went to the vicinity of the Jacksonville Bridge near Jacksonville, Fla., to stop a Chrysler roadster, alleged to be a liquor car, which had eluded the inspector. In the events which followed, Agent King was so seriously injured, it was not possible to obtain a statement from him. John Hysler, one of the occupants, and the driver of the car, was mortally wounded. An eye-witness, a man who was painting the clock on the bridge, stated that Jerry McNarnay, the other man in the car, threatened Agent King with an iron tool, as he, King, stood on the running board of the car. Hysler was pointing his gun at Agent King directly in line with the position of the witness, on the bridge. Agent King was either thrown or knocked from the running board, and as the car proceeded, Hysler pointed his gun at Agent King from the back of the car, Agent King drew his revolver from the holster and both men fired simultaneously. Both shots took effect, Agent King being shot through the torso. The firing continued. Hysler's second shot evidently broke both bones in Agent King's ankle. Jerry McNarnay, who ran from the car during the exchange of shots, returned and attempted to drive on. He was stopped, the car and Hysler, who was almost unconscious, searched. Liquor was found. McNarnay was arrested on a charge of illegal transportation and violation of section 63, United States Penal Code.

Disposition of the case: Agent King exonerated by State grand jury, November 24, 1928.

Jess Hughes

Facts of the case: On August 2, 1928, at 11.30 a. m., Agents Charles F. Cooley, McBurns, and Dave F. Brown, and Deputy Sheriff Virgil Landers, of Saline County, Mo., went to a still 1 mile north of Ownesville, in Saline County, where they found two men operating a still. Jess Hughes, an ex-convict, was one of the men. It was agreed that Agent Brown would rush the still and call to the men to surrender. When he did so Jess Hughes attempted to shoot Agent Brown with a .38-caliber automatic pistol. Just as Brown pulled his gun he was shot and killed by Agent Burns, who shot for the purpose of saving Brown's life, whom he saw Hughes was intending to shoot. The other operator at the still was apprehended.

Disposition of the case: A coroner's jury at Benton, Mo., exonerated Agent M. C. Burns, saying the shooting was justifiable.

Jim Ratliff

Facts of the case: On August 15, 1928, Agents L. B. Moreley and Sam Carden, assisted by five State officers, went to the neighborhood of Clarks Creek, Washington County, Tenn., as it had been reported that moonshine whisky in large quantities was being manufactured and transported from that section. Upon approaching a place where dense smoke was rising in the woods the officers came upon three men operating a still. They were commanded to surrender, but instead opened fire, which the officers returned. In all, 20 to 25 shots were fired, and when the firing ceased one Jim Ratliff was found to be severely wounded and bleeding profusely from a severed artery. Every aid was given him, but he died a short time after reaching the hospital in Johnson City, Tenn. E. M. Ratliff, a brother of the dead man, and J. C. Forester, the other moonshiners, were captured. They were arraigned and plead guilty to conspiracy and bound over to the United States court under $1,000 bonds each.

Jose Villegas

Facts of the case: On the afternoon of July 14, Agent Robert L. Knight, assisted by Pete Cook, an informer, proceeded to Santa Maria to work out a lead concerning Jose Villegas, a Mexican, living near Guadalupe, Calif., reputed to be leading liquor violator in that section. Agent Knight and Mr. Cook contracted with Mr. Jose Villegas to deliver 20 gallons of liquor to them. He refused to deliver it in Santa Maria. The point of delivery was decided to be about 2 miles north of Nipsomo, Calif., the exact spot being just 12 miles north of Santa Maria. At 7.30 p. m., on the night of July 14, Agents Knight and Cook proceeded to the meeting place. Villegas and his stepson drove up and deposited the kegs of whisky on the ground near the side of the road. Gomez, the stepson, drove the car down the road about 100 feet; Villegas remained with the whisky. Agents Knight and Cook drove to the spot where Villegas was awaiting. After the whisky was turned over to him, Agent Knight exhibited his badge and placed Villegas under arrest. They then started to walk toward Villegas's car when he started to run, calling in Spanish to Gomez, who was sitting in the car; upon reaching the car Gomez handed a shotgun to Villegas out of the left-front door of the sedan. As Villegas turned to Agent Knight with the leveled gun the muzzle caught in the open door of the sedan and momentarily checked the action, giving Agent Knight time to draw his pistol, and at the same time he ordered Villegas to drop the shotgun. This order was not heeded and Villegas continued to wheel around toward Agent Knight with the leveled shotgun. Agent Knight then fired his pistol and Villegas dropped to the ground, the gun flying from his hands. The wounded man was rushed to the hospital in Santa Maria, where he was immediately operated on. The operation was unsuccessful and Villegas died about 11 p. m. Agent Knight reported to Chief of Police Feland, who refused to place him under arrest. The subsequent investigation brought out the fact that Villegas had been convicted of liquor violations, both in Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo, Calif., that he was considered a dangerous character, and that Agent Knight had been warned to be exceedingly careful in dealing with him.

Disposition of the case: Agent Knight was completely exonerated, as the coroner's jury rendered a verdict to the effect that Agent Robert L. Knight was acting in the performance of his official duties when he fired the fatal shot.

Joseph O. McGuire

Facts of the case: On February 3, 1929, Agent Charles F. Peterson was deputized by Sheriff Edwin A. Bally, of Laramie, Wyo., to assist in capturing Joseph O. McGuire, who had committed a murder and was resisting arrest. Armed with tear gas bombs and guns the party proceeded to 168 North Railroad Street, Laramie, Wyo., which was the place where the murder took place. In the action which followed Agent Peterson shot through a door which McGuire slammed in his face and the bullet struck McGuire, inflicting a wound from which he later died. (A quantity of liquor was found at this place which also had a reputation as a gambling resort.)

Disposition of the case: At the coroner's inquest February 6, 1929, Agent Peterson was absolved from all blame. A verdict was rendered to the effect that Agent Peterson was acting in the discharge of his official duties and was protecting his own life when he fired the shot which resulted in the death of McGuire.

Mr. GARNER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Connecticut a question. I have been asked the question by Members on this side and I have been unable to answer. I will ask the gentleman if it is his purpose to call up the conference report to-morrow in case the Senate acts upon it this afternoon?

Mr. TILSON. That is my hope.

Mr. GARNER. The gentleman hopes to bring it back to-morrow?

Mr. TILSON. I am not sure that it will be ready, but in case it is ready I have asked permission so that we may be able to consider it to-morrow.

Mr. HASTINGS. If it were agreed to by the Senate it would not be necessary to have action on the part of the House.

Mr. TILSON. Yes; it would be necessary to have action by the House.

Mr. HASTINGS. If the Senate receded this afternoon it would not necessitate any further action on the part of the House.

Mr. TILSON. The conference report will have to be acted upon by the House before the Senate can take any action.

Mr. GARNER. I have no objection to unanimous consent, but I would like to ask the gentleman to take us into his confidence on this side as well as on that side as to what will be done to-morrow and the rest of the week?

Mr. TILSON. For to-day I know of none other than the unanimous-consent bills to be called up. Now that there is a full attendance in the House there may be a number of unanimous-consent requests concerning different matters.

Mr. GARNER. Is there anything in contemplation for the balance of the week?

Mr. TILSON. Unless we receive something from the Senate, I have no knowledge of anything else.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut asks unanimous consent that the conferees on the agricultural relief bill may have until midnight to-night in which to file their report. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. HOWARD rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Nebraska rise?

Mr. HOWARD. For the purpose of preferring a unanimous-consent request for permission to speak before the House for 15 minutes to-morrow morning following the time allotted to one of my colleagues.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the address to-morrow of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Box] he may proceed for 15 minutes. Is there objection?

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CLARKE of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech that I expected to deliver, with some comments of one of the home papers, on my attitude with the farm organizations in support of President Hoover.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I object.

FARM RELIEF

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD, the same being some observations with reference to the debenture plan.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, there are two phases, and only two, of this debenture question. One is political, the other is economic.

The political phase revolves around the question as to whether or not the enactment of some form of a debenture scheme of handling agricultural exports is necessary in order to carry out pledges made by the party platform and the party candidates in the last campaign. It may be best answered by quoting from the platform adopted at Kansas City June 14, 1928, one year ago, to a day. I shall not read the entire agricultural plank of that platform because the major portion of it is not at all pertinent to the question immediately before us, inasmuch as it was a recital of what the Republican Party had already done in behalf of agriculture. The pledges for the future were contained in the following paragraphs:

We promise every assistance in the reorganization of the marketing system on sounder and more economical lines, and, where diversification is needed, Government financial assistance during the period of transition.

The Republican Party pledges itself to the enactment of legislation creating a Federal farm board clothed with the necessary powers to promote the establishment of a farm marketing system of farmer owned and controlled stabilization corporations or associations to prevent and control surpluses through orderly distribution.

We favor adequate tariff protection to such of our agricultural products as are affected by foreign competition.

We favor, without putting the Government into business, the establishment of a Federal system of organization for cooperative and orderly marketing of farm products.

The vigorous efforts of this administration toward broadening our exports market will be continued.

The Republican Party pledges itself to the development and enactment of measures which will place the agricultural interests of America on a basis of economic equality with other industries to insure its prosperity and success.

There is not a thing in those words which could be construed either as an actual or an implied promise of the party to put into effect any plan involving the principle of the debenture scheme of financing agricultural exports.

The agricultural relief measure as passed by the House, and again, as agreed upon in the conference committee and reported back, carries out every pledge made in the party platform relative to the creation of a "Federal farm board clothed with the necessary powers to promote the establishment of a farm-marketing system of farmer owned and controlled stabilization corporations or associations to prevent and control surpluses through orderly distribution.

It contains all the necessary provisions to redeem the pledge of the party platform, set forth in the paragraph—

The vigorous efforts of this administration toward broadening our exports market will be continued.

It contains all the necessary provisions, in so far as the promotion of cooperative and orderly marketing is concerned, to redeem the pledge of the party platform contained in the following words:

The Republican Party pledges itself to the development and enactment of measures which will place the agricultural interests of America on a basis of economic equality with other industries to insure its prosperity and success.

Nowhere in the platform may be found any words which can be construed, even by doing violence to their legitimate meaning, as a pledge of the party to enact a law embodying the principles and practices of the debenture scheme. Furthermore, neither of the candidates nominated at the Kansas City convention for the office of President and Vice President at any time during the campaign, either in a set speech, extemporaneous remarks, or statements issued to the press, made any pledge which could be distorted into a promise to support a plan involving the principles and practices of the debenture scheme.

I do not question the sincerity of those who now advance the debenture scheme as a remedy for the ills of agriculture, disastrous as I believe its effects would be, so long as they do not seek to show that the Republican Party is committed to a proposal so out of keeping with its constructive record.

As against such would-be party spokesmen as now would have the country believe that somehow or in some way the debenture proposal was implied or involved in the Republican platform pledge, or that it developed even remotely as a party commitment in the campaign that followed the adoption of the platform, I take my stand with the authorized spokesman for the Republican Party in that campaign, who, speaking with the conviction of truth and the knowledge of highest responsibility, said on this point two days ago:

The conferees' bill carried out the plan advanced in the campaign in every particular. Every other plan of agricultural relief was rejected in that campaign, and this plan was one of the most important issues in the principal agricultural States and was given as a mandate by an impressive majority in these States. Subsidies were condemned in the course of the campaign, and the so-called debenture plan—that is, the giving of subsidies on exports—was not raised by either party nor by its proponents.

So much for the political phase of the problem.

The other phase of this question is economic. It certainly should not be difficult to prove that the debenture scheme is uneconomic. It would not help the agricultural producer. To the contrary, it would positively injure him. Furthermore, it would injure practically every other legitimate producer in the United States. This proposition can be demonstrated so easily that it is a matter of considerable wonderment why it has obtained its support of otherwise straight-thinking men.

The debenture plan provides that there shall be issued to actual exporters of agricultural products coming under the provisions of the plan an export debenture. This debenture is a bankable and negotiable certificate for the payment to its holder of a sum equivalent to the quantity of the article exported multiplied by one-half the tariff on that article. For example, an exporter of 100,000 bushels of wheat would, under the debenture scheme, receive certificates worth on their face $21,000; this is arrived at by the process of multiplying 100,000 bushels by one-half the tariff on wheat; that tariff is 42 cents; 100,000 times one-half of 42 cents is $21,000.

A debenture certificate possessed by an importer of any kind of goods is worth its face value to him, being taken at its face value at the customhouses in lieu of cash in payment of import duties.

Now, let us see how it works. In the first place, the issuance of debentures are confined to the actual exporters. The farmer, as an individual, is not an actual exporter. Between the time the products of his soil—be they grain, livestock, or dairy products, or what else—have left his hands and reach the hands of the actual exporter they have, as a rule, passed through the hands of several middlemen. Therefore the farmer, in whose behalf support of the debenture plan is invoked, would never see one of these debenture certificates. He would never get his fingers upon a single one of them.

Throughout the entire debate of the debenture proposition, and particularly at this time because of the low price wheat is bringing, this scheme has been urged as a relief to the wheat farmer. No living man can demonstrate how the actual farmer who raises and sells wheat would receive one cent benefit from the plan. The debenture, paying 21 cents a bushel, would be issued to the actual exporter, and there is no way under the sun to compel the actual exporter to pass any part of this 21-cents bonus or subsidy which he receives back to the farmer.

Let us continue to trace the course of the debenture. The actual exporter of 100,000 bushels of wheat receives a debenture certificate with a face value of $21,000. That certificate is of value only to an importer. Except upon rare occasions the exporter of wheat is not an importer. He therefore seeks to market his debenture certificate to an importer. He has received the market price for his wheat, plus $21,000, which every one must admit is a pretty slick commission on that amount of wheat. It represents to him "pure velvet." He can well afford to sell his debenture certificate for much less than its face value of $21,000, and he undoubtedly would do so. He could afford to sell it for half its face value and still reap a good commission on his transaction. But let it be understood the sole market for his certificate is confined to importers.

Now, let us see what happens. He sells his debenture certificate to an importer for less than its face value. We will say, in order to speedily dispose of it and obtain the ready cash, he sells his certificate for $15,000. This transaction marks the end of the debenture scheme in so far as it affects exporters and farmers. From here the history of the debenture deals with importers and the United States Treasury. At this particular point the farmer, the agricultural producer, passes completely out of the picture, if he ever was in it, and no one can adduce the slightest evidence that up to this point the actual farmer would receive one penny's benefit from the debenture plan. Up to date it has enriched only the commission men and speculators.

Now, the importer has the debenture certificate, worth on its face value $21,000, for which he paid $15,000. He presents this certificate at the customhouse in payment of tariff upon his goods, and the customhouse must, under this scheme, accept it at face value. So the importer has paid $21,000 of tariff duties at an actual cost to himself of only $15,000. This is exactly the equivalent of lowering the tariff, which immediately and inevitably results in an increase of imported articles of all kinds.

Under this scheme it would make no difference how high the tariff was raised, for the higher the tariff on wheat the higher would be the value of the debenture certificate which, when purchased by the importer at a discount, would enable him to import articles upon which there had been an increased rate upon the same basis as if there had been no increase. This operates to the injury of every other producer in the United States, whether he be a producer of manufactured articles or a producer of agricultural products, the like of which are imported. Why, under this proposition, the importer of butter or dairy products could buy debenture certificates from exporters of wheat at a discount sufficient to enable him to import dairy products and undersell the dairy interests in this country.

There is not the slightest feature of the proposed debenture scheme which would operate to benefit actual agricultural producers. However well it may sound in theory, in actual practice the dirt farmer would be completely out of the picture. The financial benefits of the debenture plan would not begin to be apparent until after the agricultural product had left the farmers' hands. If the debenture scheme were properly labeled, it would be entitled, "An act to enrich commission men, exporters, and speculators in farm products, to enrich importers, lower the tariff and increase imports to the detriment of our American industries."

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all gentlemen may have five legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the debenture plan, in view of the fact that we have no opportunity to debate the matter this morning.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that all Members may have five legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the debenture proposition. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SPEECH OF HON. JOSEPH W. BYRNS

Mr. McDUFFIE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech delivered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] on the occasion of the dinner of the Jefferson Democratic Association of the District of Columbia to the Hon. Jouett Shouse.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks by printing an address recently delivered by the gentleman from Tennessee, Mr. BYRNS. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the speech of Hon. JOSEPH W. BYRNS, chairman of the Democratic national congressional committee, at dinner given in honor of Hon. Jouett Shouse, chairman of the executive committee of the Democratic national committee, by the Jefferson Democratic Association of the District of Columbia, the night of June 10, 1929.

The speech is as follows:

Democrats were greatly gratified when it was announced by the able chairman of our national committee that it was his intention to maintain permanent headquarters in Washington. The greatest handicap under which the Democratic Party has labored in past years is either the lack of information or the actual misinformation of the people concerning the conduct of their public affairs. The opposition party—the party of privilege, which, as a distinguished Democratic nominee for President said a few years ago, always has something to sell to those whom it serves—has controlled and continues to control most of the avenues of publicity, and hence the accomplishments of the Democratic Party under the leadership of that great Democrat, Woodrow Wilson, and likewise those things for which it has stood and fought during eight years of Republican misrule, have never been fully understood and appreciated. And so I am sure that I speak the sentiment of Democrats generally when I say to Mr. Raskob that he has rendered a real service to the cause of Democracy in the action which he has taken. It has given to the Democrats of the Nation not only a hope but a promise of success in the elections to come. And need I say to you who know him that the chairman displayed that excellent judgment and wise discrimination that has characterized him in the conduct of his private affairs when he chose for the head and active leadership in the headquarters which he has established the honored guest of the evening, the Hon. Jouett Shouse. A product and citizen of the South and the great Middle West, which he at one time ably represented in Congress, possessing an intimate knowledge of the great and constructive work of Woodrow Wilson's administration, of which he was an important part, thoroughly familiar with the history of our party, and imbued with an earnest belief in its underlying principles, his appointment was an ideal one, and we rejoice in the selection in the confident belief that active control has been placed in the hands of the right man, and we pledge him our earnest cooperation in the important work before him.

No one can be wholly satisfied with conditions as they exist in our National Government to-day. Congress was called into extra session we were told because agriculture needed immediate relief. It was declared that a farm relief bill would be passed and that there would be a limited revision of the tariff with the primary, if not the only, purpose of relieving agriculture from its distressed condition. But it appears that this was made the excuse for bringing about a general revision of the tariff upward on commodities already highly protected and in which special interests are deeply concerned. The House has passed a tariff bill imposing higher tariff rates than were ever carried in any bill in the entire history of the country. It raised rates on certain products of industry which will cost the consumers from six to eight hundred millions of dollars a year. The increased duty on sugar will cost the homes of the country three hundred and forty millions a year. Instead of carrying out the declared purpose of equalizing the tariff benefits on agricultural and industrial products it has increased the difference by raising the rates on industry over 1 per cent more than it did on agriculture. Under its provisions the constitutional prerogative of Congress to levy taxes are surrendered to the President by giving him the authority to change the tariff rates to the extent of 50 per cent. We have proceeded entirely too far in the centralization of power here in Washington to such an extent as to threaten the foundation of our institutions and now Congress proposes to give into the hands of the President the most important privilege of the people—the power to impose and levy taxes.

The South and the country expected that the distinguished engineer in the White House would have some plan for the prompt utilization for the Government's enormous investment at Muscle Shoals which a Republican administration has permitted to lie practically idle for 10 years. But we are told that this is not to be considered at this session, although there is ample time to do so.

The agricultural West and the country expected that some concrete plan for farm relief would be proposed. But if Mr. Hoover had a plan it was never submitted and Congress was left to work out its own plan. A bill is about to be passed which has had the support of members of both parties in the hope that it will be of some relief, but many farm organizations, as well as many Members of Congress, have declared that it does not go far enough and will not afford the fullest measure of relief that is possible.

And now with the tariff bill pending in the Senate and with business in suspense on account of the uncertainty; with agriculture still suffering the Republican leaders are planning for Congress to take a recess of several months with the tasks for which it was actually called uncompleted. An unusual and really distressing situation confronts the country. A Republican President, a Republican Senate, and a Republican House do not seem to be able to agree upon anything. Neither is willing to trust the judgment of the other in solving the problems confronting them. Leadership no longer exists. They are floundering in a sea of doubt and uncertainty. What can we expect for the future prosperity of our country under such circumstances? They do not know what to do or which way to turn and now they propose to go home for a season with the Micawber-like hope that in the meantime some idea will suggest itself or some one may think of a solution for the problems which have arisen under Republican rule to plague the body politic.

Is it surprising that evidences of the dissatisfaction of the people have been clearly manifested in the only two elections which have occurred since Mr. Hoover was inaugurated? One in Kentucky where a Republican majority of 4,000 last November was turned into a Democratic majority of over 1,000 a few days ago and the other in a Pennsylvania district which is over two to one Republican, but where the Democratic candidate was defeated on the face of returns by only 1,000 votes out of over 60,000 cast, and where a contest is to be instituted because of alleged frauds and the corrupt use of large sums by the Republican machine—a practice which seems to have become a habit in Republican elections in Pennsylvania.

The Democratic Party, although in the minority in both branches of Congress, has an opportunity to render a splendid service to the country and if it renders that service faithfully and intelligently it is certain to be swept into power by a people who are already disappointed by the procrastination, the failure, and the uncertainty of the present administration and Congress. Let us not waste our energy in wrangling over issues which do not involve the fundamental principles of our party. Let us rather exert ourselves to create a constructive program in the interest of the prosperity of the country and stand together on those principles in which we all believe and which have preserved our party during all the years of our Republic. Why bother now about who will be the candidate and what will be the issues three years hence? No one can say three years in advance who our candidate will be or what the issues will be in the next campaign. Our leader in the last campaign has recently declared that the issues will be made by the Democrats who are in Congress. The democracy will choose its candidate when the time comes.

Many were led away in the last campaign on issues which had no proper place in that contest but which were magnified by a subtle opposition and an unfriendly press. We have had and still have lines of cleavage in our party, but true followers of Thomas Jefferson should forget these differences in the fight against the common enemy. The Democratic Party is big enough; its record is glorious enough to embrace among its following everyone who loves his Government and who believes that it should be administered for the benefit of all the people and not alone for the favored few. To everyone who believes in popular government; to everyone who believes in its orderly processes and that all laws on the statute books should be enforced; to everyone who is opposed to the further centralization of power at Washington; to everyone who believes as did Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland, and Wilson, that the benefits of government should be impartially bestowed and that one class of our citizenship should not be preferred over another, the call is insistent to lay aside any prejudices we may have and forget any differences which may have swayed us in the past. The restoration of democratic policies and principles in our Government is too important to be jeopardized by a division in our ranks as we stand facing the common foe. If we resolve to follow this course, then we may confidently look forward to the triumphant success of a united and militant democracy under the leadership of the honor guest of the evening.

Mr. DOUGLASS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include an article entitled "Bring Them Back to the Constitution," written by Hon. JOHN W. McCORMACK, of Massachusetts, and published in the Jewish Advocate of April 25, 1929:

[From the Jewish Advocate, April 25, 1929]

BRING THEM BACK TO THE CONSTITUTION

The Constitution of the United States, which is the mouthpiece of the sovereign power of America, and which is the people collectively, not only established a framework of government, with its three coordinate departments, defining their powers, but also stated therein the rights and privileges of all citizens and inhabitants of our country. It was only a few years before the drafting of the Constitution that the thirteen Colonies had emerged successfully from the conflict for independence. The supermen who sat in the Constitutional Convention from which emanated our fundamental law realized that the underlying motive of the colonists seeking independence was to secure for themselves and their posterity the blessings of a free government which recognized human rights and liberties.

In the dark and trying days of the Revolutionary War the inspiration to endure the trials and hardships that history records, and to "carry on," was the realization that success meant "life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness, equality under the law, the freedom of speech and of the press, and many other inherent rights, the greatest of all being the right of religious freedom." The records of the war of independence show that men of all nationalities fought and died shoulder to shoulder that the blessings of liberty and freedom under the law might be attained. It was only natural that the framers of the Constitution should and did incorporate into our fundamental law those ideals and principles of democracy. They are the foundation of our Government; the inspiration of Americans of all generations. As long as Americans love and respect those great human truths, not only in theory, but in fact, so long will our institutions exist. The future of America is safe so long as there is love and respect on the part of all for the Constitution.

It is those guaranties of a free and sovereign power to its individual citizens that has properly entitled our country to be called "the land of freedom." It is those principles that have prompted the enslaved and persecuted people of all lands and of all generations to seek "this haven of freedom," where all are equal in the eyes of the law, and where all are necessary and component parts of the sovereign power. It is those guaranties of personal liberty that are the origin and cause of our great growth; from 4,000,000 souls in 1790 to 120,000,000 souls in 1929; from the weakest nation in the civilized world in 1790 to the most powerful in 1929. In every great crisis that has confronted our country, the War of 1812, the Civil War, Spanish-American War, the World War, all nationalities have responded to the call for service. In the colonization and development of the great West, in our progress along political, social, and commercial lines, and in every other respect, men and women of all nationalities and descents and of all religious creeds, imbued with a love of the Constitution, have contributed toward our great progress.

America's progress is due to the contributions of men and women of all nationalities and descents. The test of an ideal American citizen is not nationality, descent, or religion, but is love of Constitution, country, and flag. To love the Constitution means that one must adhere not only to its spirit, but to its letter. One can not deny or desire to deny to others the rights and privileges that the Constitution guarantees to all and be an ideal American. As intolerance is prohibited by the Constitution, the converse is equally true, that tolerance is one of its requirements to ideal citizenship. Unfortunately, the real meaning of the Constitution has been and will continue to be misunderstood and misapplied by some. Racial and religious intolerance has been and is still, to some extent, the curse of the human race. If, and wherever, it exists in America it is contrary to the teachings of our fundamental law.

It therefore follows that the Constitution, commanding tolerance and respect on the part of all of the rights of others hereunder, that no person is an American in the eyes of that "sacred document" who would directly or indirectly deny or attempt to deny to others because of race, color, or creed the rights guaranteed by our fundamental law. There is no justification, either in law or in fact, for the existence of intolerance anywhere, particularly in America, because of racial or religious differences.

Intolerance wherever it exists usually follows ignorance as to the intent and motives of those against whom the prejudice is entertained. In some few cases it is the deliberate attempt to exploit and capitalize for one's personal gain the ignorant but honestly entertained narrow and perverted views of others. In the case of intolerance through ignorance, to classify such for descriptive purposes, it is necessary in part to remove that honestly entertained but misguided feeling through education and in part through the exercise of the privilege of suffrage along American lines by the election of those who are imbued with the spirit of America and tolerance. The exploiters of prejudice and intolerance should be met with open contempt and shown no mercy or sympathy by decent American citizens. In any event intolerance, if it exists, should not be met by intolerance. The old saying "that two wrongs do not make one right" applies to such a situation. However, all elements are justified in preserving their rights under the Constitution, pursuing methods under and within the law. To this extent all other broad and tolerant members of American society should assist them in their efforts. Resistance within the law to the formation of unjust and hostile opinion against a racial element or creed is a public duty.

There is no reason why there should be any racial or religious feelings directed by some toward other Americans. The commands of the Constitution and the history of our country justify that assertion. There should be no such citizen as Jew, Irish, English, German, French, Italian, or other nationality; while we are all of varied racial descents, of which we should be proud, we are all Americans. Therefore, there should be only one type of citizen in the minds of all; the American type. When that becomes an established fact in America racial, and in the main, religious differences, will disappear. So long as we refer to each other as some nationality other than American, racial prejudice and intolerance is bound to exist. While some of our racial elements, which reference is made descriptively, are more to blame for racial intolerance in America than others, nevertheless all of our elements are to some extent to blame, at least to the extent of referring to themselves or others, or permitting others to refer to them, as belonging to some nationality other than American. No matter what may be the land of the birth or whatever may be the race of our forbears, we are Americans. That does not mean that we should not have a regard for the land and race of our forbears, or not to assist them or to be charitable toward them in time of need or distress, but it does mean that in case of conflict of any kind with the best interests of America that our regard sinks into oblivion.

The progress of civilization and of mankind is due to the contributions of all races. History records that the contributions of the Jewish or Hebrew race is second to none. It is not my intention to refer to the contributions of other races but to confine myself briefly to some of the great contributions made by the Hebrew race.

Long before the Christian era the Jewish race fought idolatry. History records how their own "Lord of Hosts" guided them in their wanderings and fought with them in battle against their enemies, and how He wisely advised them to govern themselves. It also records how they created for themselves and transmitted to other races a superb literature in both prose and poetry, and later contributed to the preservation and transmission to modern times of the literature of other nations, such as Greece, Rome, and Arabia. From the earliest time to the latest the Hebrew race has been a literate people, passing down from father to son and from generation to generation the art of reading and writing, the love of letters, and the strong belief in education. On down the centuries the synagogue has been a school for children and adults, and the rabbis have been teachers of morality, social order, and domestic honor and love.

They, like other races, particularly the Irish, have undergone vicious and unwarranted persecutions. The moral teachings which have come down through the Jewish race have not and never will be forgotten. Those teachings, with the teachings of Christianity, constitute modern civilization.

The part that they played in the discovery, settlement, and development of the United States has been great and should not and can not be underestimated. The whole history of the Jewish race has been one of constructive contribution, under the greatest of difficulties, to the progress of mankind and civilization.

Inoffensive, lovable, sincere, charitable, frugal, imbued with love of free government, their contributions to American progress occupies prominent pages in the history of our country.

Wherever intolerance exists in America the remedy is to "Bring them back to the Constitution."

THE TARIFF

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the tariff bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, a tariff is a scale or table of charges, such as insurance tariffs, railroad tariffs, and customs tariffs. As I use the term "tariff," it is synonymous with customs tariffs. A tariff act is a law which provides duties or rates on articles of import.

The origin of the term "tariff" it is said can be traced to the little Spanish coast town of Tarifa, from which in the long ago the boats of the feudal lord went forth to demand toll from every passing ship. This is now what happens in every harbor the world over. Tariff in the familiar sense has come to mean: "The toll demanded of foreign goods before they enter domestic markets."

Foreigners have no right to trade in the United States, except by comity of nations. The tariff in the United States is to be considered and weighed as it affects the interests of the Nation. Generally, a tariff is based upon both the economic and political conditions of a country. It is a compromise between the interests of the producers and the consumers.

A tariff is levied under the authority of the Constitution to lay and collect duties and imposts. The history of tariff legislation is interesting. The First Congress passed a tariff act in 1789, to collect revenue and to stimulate manufactures. Alexander Hamilton was the first Secretary of the Treasury and was the spokesman of the manufacturing and commercial interests of his time. He submitted A Report on Manufactures and suggested a bounty to encourage agricultural production. The embargo acts growing out of the events leading up to the War of 1812 and the Napoleonic wars, together with the tariff act of 1816, resulted in growth and prosperity to the manufacturers of the country. It is worth while to observe that statesmen frequently change their views on public issues. Gladstone began his career as a Tory or Conservative, and concluded his service to his country as a Liberal, while Disraeli started out as a Liberal, and ended as a Conservative. In 1824, John C. Calhoun advocated a protective tariff, while Daniel Webster opposed it. Later Webster became an advocate of protection, while Calhoun in 1828 opposed a high protective tariff. The tariff of 1846, known as the Walker tariff, brought great prosperity to the country and resulted in a large surplus in the Treasury. It promoted manufacturing and industry, with average duties of 25 per cent.

For a long time American statesmen maintained that the tariff could not be used in the aid of agriculture, and that its aim was to promote manufactures. William McKinley was probably the first to advocate the use of the tariff to protect agriculture.

A tariff may be primarily for revenue or primarily for protection. After the war between the States the tariff was utilized primarily for the protection of the manufacturer. It has been so used ever since. Wars led to national political and economic independence. The successful Franco-Prussian War in 1870 led to high tariffs in Germany. The World War has led to still higher tariffs in all of the leading countries.

POLITICAL PARTIES AND THE TARIFF

Prior to 1928 the Democratic formula generally accepted was, "The levy of duties that will insure the maintenance of competition between foreign and domestic producers." The Underwood tariff of 1913 adopted the competitive formula. Its aim was to promote legitimate industry, and rates were based upon careful and scientific study.

The Republican Party had adopted the principle that the rate of duty should be the difference between domestic and foreign costs of production. The underlying principle of the Payne-Aldrich tariff was the equalizing of the costs of production. This was the principle of the Fordney-McCumber Act of 1922. The flexible provisions of the act of 1922 adopted as the measure of the rate the difference between the costs of production in the United States and abroad.

It may be said, therefore, that prior to 1928 both the Republican and Democratic Parties stood for the protective theory and for the protective tariff as opposed to free trade, or a tariff for revenue only. As a matter of fact, there is but little difference between the competitive tariff of the Underwood bill and the equalization of costs of production in the Fordney Act. The principle underlying both is to enable domestic producers to compete on even terms with foreign producers. Fairly and consistently applied, there is no essential difference between a competitive and an equalizing cost of production tariff.

It is frequently said that the Underwood tariff of 1913 broke down completely. Conditions following the World War are cited in support of the charge. The greatest war in history undoubtedly affected economic conditions. Both political and economic changes were necessary. However, the test is, the fair comparison is, the difference between conditions in the United States and conditions in other belligerent countries following the World War. Unemployment, losses in agriculture and manufacturing were not all due to the tariff act of 1913. It was the inevitable reaction following the greatest of all wars. Readjustments under the Underwood Act were necessary, however. No tariff act is perfect. All are subject to change. Then, too, there must be economic as well as political independence.

PLATFORMS OF 1928

Since the war agriculture has been discriminated against. Manufacturing has made adjustments following the period of deflation. Both political parties have recognized the inequalities of tariff legislation between manufacturing and farming. The Democratic platform of 1928 declared that the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, with an adequate safeguard for the wages of the American laborer, is the correct measure of the tariff rate, and that in its tariff policy there would be equality of treatment between agriculture and other industries. The Republican platform declared for a protective tariff for both agriculture and manufacturing. It also declared that the home market belonged to the American farmer, and that he was entitled to the home market to the extent of his ability to supply it. Differences between foreign wages and foreign costs of living are to be considered in agriculture as well as in manufacturing.

Moreover, President Hoover asserted that the tariff is a major factor, if not the basis, in legislation for farm relief. While James G. Blaine, John Sherman, James A. Garfield, and their contemporaries asserted that the tariff could not be used to protect agriculture, Herbert Hoover and his contemporaries advocate the tariff as a means to remove the inequalities between agriculture and manufacturing.

Henry Clay advocated the tariff for the benefit of manufacturing industries on the infant-industry theory. John Stuart Mills, a great free trader, admitted that there was an exception in favor of the infant industries to promote manufacturing. It is well to keep in mind, however, that Adam Smith said, more than 150 years ago, that no government has ever given equal protection to agriculture and commerce. No one now advocates a protective tariff in the aid of infant industries.

STANDARDS OF LIVING AND HIGHER WAGES

The theory of a tariff to promote infant industries was discarded long ago. The favorite plea of those who advocate protective tariffs now is to safeguard and promote standards of American labor. This is bolstering high protection by mere claptrap. Other countries have higher tariffs than the United States. Their standards of living are lower than in the United States. Before the World War, England had free trade and yet England paid the highest wages in the world except the United States. Higher wages and higher standards of living result from better production. They do not follow higher tariffs. They are the result of the efficiency and the genius of the laborer. The use of machinery has much to do with the standards of living. The well informed, the intelligent, those who think for themselves, do not now repeat the assertion that protective tariffs provide higher standards of living. This argument is without solid foundation and is not even a feeble prop upon which to base a claim for high protection. Laboring classes are not maintained by high tariffs. Their standards are promoted by production. The standard-of-living fallacy has been repeated ad nauseam. It is a bald error. Labor organizations are responsible for higher wages and better standards of living.

Economists are in general agreement that the fundamental cause for high wages is the high productivity of labor. The theory that high protection promotes higher standards of living among laborers is rejected by all respectable economists and all candid statesmen.

Furthermore, it may be said that unfair protection leads to antiquated and inefficient methods of production. May not this be the trouble with the shoe manufacturing of New England? May this not also be the difficulty with the textiles of New England? Nothing is more deceptive or ignorant than the claim that wages are higher because of protective tariffs. If this were true, there would be higher wages in other countries than in the United States. The pauper-labor argument, like the infant-industry theory, has been completely discarded. We now hear of vested interests and home markets. There are reasons for agreements with other countries. In passing, it might be observed that it was formerly maintained that a protective tariff was necessary in the United States because wages were high. It was asserted in the early days of manufacturing in the United States that high wages handicapped American manufacturers.

AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES

One of the dangers of high tariffs is monopoly. It is easy for manufacturers to organize. Trusts and monopolies follow dishonest tariffs. It is universally acknowledged, however, that a tariff on agricultural commodities that are sold within the United States as cheaply as abroad is of no consequence or direct benefit to the producer.

A tariff on an agricultural commodity of which we produce an exportable surplus is of no benefit. It is a mere gesture. It is used as a cloak for those who are specially benefited to perpetuate their claim to special favors. The world price of a world crop controls. The tariff can not be of benefit to the grower in the domestic market, and certainly it can not influence the world market. A tariff on short-staple cotton, wheat, or corn is worse than an empty gesture. It is bold deception. The American farmer is hoodwinked into supporting a tariff act that enriches industry and pauperizes farming. There is pauper labor on foreign farms as well as in foreign factories. The agricultural unrest and dissatisfaction in the United States will never be removed until the Government of the United States has extended to agriculture benefits that are comparable to the tariff benefits now extended to manufacturing.

The domestic trade of the United States amounts to $90,000,000,000 annually, while the foreign trade is approximately one-tenth of that amount, or $9,000,000,000. This includes both imports and exports. There is undoubted merit in the claim that to the average producer, whether he is a manufacturer or a farmer, the American market is desirable. The manufacturer, by organization, can secure a monopoly. The grower of limited crops can be benefited, but the grower of world crops receives no direct or comparable benefits under a protective tariff.

TARIFF ACT OF 1929

The tariff rests upon the power of Congress to levy and collect duties upon imports. The tariff act of 1929 gives us a new formula. The flexible provisions are intended to adjust the difference in competitive conditions in this country and abroad in order to give the American producer and the American laborer a proper opportunity in the American market. This formula is nebulous. It is nothing like as definite or certain as the difference in the costs of production formula. Moreover, it is a rank abdication of Congress in favor of the Executive. It is the most gigantic step toward further bureaucracy since the World War. It is fraught with much danger to the principle for which this Government was founded. There must be no taxation without representation. Congress, in the flexible provisions of the tariff act of 1929, has surrendered to the Executive the power to tax. The power to tax is also the power to destroy. Again, the middle or laboring classes will bear the burdens. The customs duties under the tariff act of 1929 will come very largely from the necessities of life. More than one-third of the total annual duties now collected of $600,000,000 is now paid direct by the consumers on imported sugar. The consumer will largely bear the burdens, while agriculture will secure but few benefits under the tariff act of 1929.

It was said that the tariff and farm relief must go hand in hand. It was argued that the tariff is primarily in aid of agriculture. As is always the case, however, the special interests obtain the advantage. It may be called a readjustment instead of a revision. It is a readjustment, however, in the aid of manufacturing. It is but little comfort to the farmers of the land who are now in distress.

PROTECTION

It matters but little what our theories on the tariff are. There must be protection for all, or there should be protection for none. We are face to face with conditions to-day, not theories. Forty years ago, it looked as if free trade would dominate the world. England had free trade before the World War. She was the great creditor nation of the world, but the war has changed the situation. The leading nations of the world have gone to protection. Both of the great political parties in the United States recognize that the protective theory now obtains. It is not a theory or a principle, so much as a condition that the United States faces to-day. There are too many trade agreements. There are too many favored-nation clauses in tariff acts in other countries for the United States to reverse suddenly its protective policy.

I advocate necessary or reasonable tariffs. I oppose favoritism. I advocate an honest tariff. I oppose a dishonest tariff. I maintain that there is substantially no difference to-day between the Democratic and Republican principles of the tariff. The difference is in the application. A Democratic tariff would permit imports on a competitive basis. A Republican tariff would keep out imports. A Democratic tariff would promote trade and commerce. It would place the domestic producer, with his unexcelled and undisputed efficiency, on equal or better terms with his foreign competitor. It would promote effective competition, which is the life of all trade and commerce.

It is sometimes said that a protective tariff will promote domestic competition as an important factor in determining prices paid by the consumer. Yet protection has its evils. It leads to substitutes. It may prevent prosperity to the laborer by denying a market to the product of the laborer.

Economic isolation is followed by political isolation. The world is jealous of America to-day. We occupy a political isolation. I know that there have been important economic as well as political changes throughout the world. I know that industry in the United States has been built up on the basis of high tariffs. This fact must be kept in mind. There must be no revolution, but at the same time there should be an extension of the policy of protection. Conditions are changing more in agricultural production than in manufacturing. Lands are being depleted. Soils are being impoverished. Conditions are reversed from what they were 100 years ago in the United States. Then manufacturing was difficult. Farming was easy. Lands were new. Now the situation has changed. There must be equality for agriculture to-day.

EFFECTS

The advocates of high protection point to the fact that the export trade of the United States has increased since 1922. This increase, however, was not because of the tariff but in spite of it. It follows the expansion of trade and the increase in population. It is significant when we consider the effect of the tariff, that the American share in world trade has declined slightly since 1922, although imports and exports have increased in volume. Mr. E. Dana Duran, Chief of the Division of Statistical Research, Department of Commerce, made the statement on May 18, 1929, that the American share in the world trade had decreased since 1922. It is not a question of whether our export trade has increased or not. It is a question of whether our share has increased.

The leading business men of the United States are only asking that American business men have an equal chance in American markets. They are only asking that measure of protection which will represent the difference in living standards and wage scales between America and its competitors. Growing and enlarging American business men to-day will be satisfied with a competitive tariff. They are in favor of the principle of protection, but they suggest caution in the application of the principle. They want the Congress of the United States to adopt a fair and honest principle of tariff, and they expect Congress to stick to it. They do not want the case to be overstated. They know that a prohibitive tariff will end in reprisals.

The effects of tariff legislation are frequently overestimated. The country can accommodate itself to almost any reasonable tariff system, but it has the right to ask that that system be definite and settled. Business wants certainty.

It by no means follows that the producer will receive the benefit of the tariff.

It seldom increases the price by the amount of the rate, but a prohibitive tariff can destroy trade.

Since the great World War the United States has become the creditor nation of the world. Our allies owe us $10,000,000,000. We have made investments abroad aggregating $15,000,000,000 or $16,000,000,000 more. Our income is around $90,000,000,000 annually. Our creditors can only pay in goods or in services. Prohibitive tariffs will prevent the collection of our foreign debts.

High protective tariffs will hinder our foreign trade. It will retard commerce with Canada, Mexico, and Central and South America. It is important to remember that we entered the foreign fields in the Western Hemisphere when Great Britain, France, and Germany retired because of the World War. We assert the Monroe doctrine. We need the friendship of our American neighbors. Canada is our best customer. We export twice as much to Canada at the present time as there is imported to us from Canada.

The fine effects of President Hoover's South American tour will be more than offset by prohibitive tariffs. Labor is certainly no cheaper in Canada than it is in the United States.

I oppose free trade. I oppose a tariff for revenue only. I know that new conditions require new treatments. I stand for a reasonable and effective tariff that will foster agriculture and manufacturing at home and promote trade and commerce abroad.

SUBSIDIES

The tariff of 42 cents a bushel on wheat is retained, and the tariff on corn is increased from 15 to 25 cents a bushel. All statesmen, however, are agreed that the tariff on agricultural products of which we produce an exportable surplus is not effective.

Agriculture is discriminated against. The lack of equality between agriculture and manufacturing is glaring. Some method must be devised to give the farmer the equivalent benefits of the tariff. It may be by bounty. Those who advocate the tariff for manufacturing oppose a bounty for the farmer. In the last analysis they are both subsidies. The manufacturer profits by a tariff, while the farmer, with other consumers, pays the price. The farmer now pays more for his food, clothing, implements, and supplies than he did in 1914. The debenture has been suggested so that the farmer may appear in the tariff picture. The purpose is to utilize a part of the customs duties collected on imports to pay a bounty to the farmer on cotton, wheat, and corn exported. The idea is to make agriculture a part of the tariff system. The proposition, as an independent one, is indefensible. The theory with proper safeguards against overproduction and reimportation, provided the grower receives the direct benefit and provided the bounty on cotton is sufficient, may be the solution.

Not only does the tariff discriminate against the farmer but the railway structure of the country is unfair to him. I am not at all frightened when the industrial representatives denounce a bounty when it is invoked for the benefit of the farmer. The discrimination in freight rates in favor of manufacturers who export is indefensible, unless the benefits are extended to agriculture.

The protective tariff preserves the home market for the domestic manufacturer. If labor is cheaper in manufacturing in other countries, it is also cheaper in agriculture. The American farmer has the additional handicap of buying his supplies in a protected market.

FREIGHT RATES

The freight rates on agricultural implements from Chicago to New Orleans in carloads, when intended for export to Europe, is 47½ cents per hundred pounds, while the domestic farmers pay 73 cents per hundred pounds. The rate from Chicago to San Francisco, when the implements are to be exported, is $1 per hundred pounds, while, if the implements are to be used by American farmers, the freight rate is $1.93 per hundred pounds.

Again, the freight rates on manufactured iron and steel articles from Chicago to San Francisco, when they are intended for export is 40 cents per hundred pounds, whereas, if they are for domestic use, the rate is $1 per hundred pounds.

Again, if passenger automobiles are bought by American farmers, the freight rate from Cleveland, Ohio, to New Orleans, La., is $2.42 per hundred pounds, while if the competitor of the American farmer in foreign countries buys an American automobile, the rate is $1.74 per hundred pounds.

I know that the rate structure of the country is an intricate one. Recently, however, the railways of the country have voluntarily reduced the prices on wheat intended for export. This is a step in the right direction. Fair play demands that agriculture be accorded the same rights in freight rates given to steel and automobiles. Cotton and other agricultural products must now pay the export premiums accorded to steel and automobiles. The railways are entitled to a reasonable income. If there is a reduction on one commodity, the aggregate income required on railways must be made up on another commodity. If the rates on cotton intended for export were materially reduced, the farmer would get the benefit. The world price in cotton controls, and the result would be reflected in a higher price to the farmer for his product.

The agricultural problem is national. Manufacturing can not prosper permanently without agriculture.

The textile interests admit that they have a vital interest in the prosperity of the American cotton grower. They manifest much concern about his welfare. The suggestion is made that Egyptian cotton would deteriorate but for the importation of American long-staple cotton. The proposition is advanced that the prosperity of the American cotton grower could be promoted by denying the right to export cottonseed. This is strange economics. Cotton is a world product. Its prosperity can be promoted by cooperation.

Again, if the textile manufacturer knew anything about the growth of cotton, he would know that the constant use of any one kind of seed without change results in a deteriorated staple. Can the American grower maintain his staple without according his competitor a similar chance?

In his zeal to aid the farmer the textile representative who appeared before the Agricultural Committee and the Committee on Ways and Means suggested that the Government should eliminate the boll weevil. The solution was advanced that standardizing the seed would result in prosperity to the cotton grower. If the textile manufacturer were not so selfish, if he were familiar with conditions in the Cotton Belt, he would know that the cotton grower is constantly perfecting his seed. Marvelous progress has been made in standardizing. I admit there is further room for improvement. As to Government aid in the fight against the boll weevil the textile manufacturer betrays his ignorance. The Government has fostered every known method to eliminate the boll weevil. When pressed for a solution the textile manufacturer is utterly without a suggestion as to how the Government can eradicate the boll weevil. His advocacy of Government aid in standardization and boll-weevil elimination is a smoke screen. It was advanced to divert attention from the argument that a tariff on long-staple cotton would be effective. The manufacturer asking for increased duties on the manufactured products of long-staple cotton threw out a decoy to prevent the domestic grower from getting the equivalent benefits of the tariff.

I have no patience with such sophistry. It is passing strange that the petitions of growers are unheeded, while the deceptions of those who enjoy special favors are harkened. When Congress grants a tariff to the manufacturer, it is based upon the request of the manufacturer. Justice and fairness demand that the conclusions of the growers shall be considered in the enactment of legislation. If this had been done, the House would have granted a tariff on long-staple cotton.

AGRICULTURE AND INDUSTRY

In the older countries agriculture has been subordinated to industry. The protective tariff in the United States promotes industry at the expense of agriculture. Industry is promoted by a tariff. When the farmer asks for equality of treatment, he is told that economic laws must run their course and that the price of farm products is governed by the law of supply and demand. This is rank hypocrisy. There is unjust discrimination when the manufacturer demands protection and insists upon free raw material.

I am thinking of the tariff act of 1929 and its effect upon the people of Mississippi, where cotton is the chief product. Refrigeration and modern transportation have made possible increases in prices on vegetables, fruits, and perishable crops, by the use of the protective tariff. The tariff can not be used for price control of the cotton market. I did not support the tariff bill as passed by the House. There are no benefits to the cotton grower by way of the tariff, while the costs of growing cotton are enormously increased. There is no equality in the treatment of cotton and the manufactured products of cotton. The one is free, the others are protected. I oppose the pending tariff bill because additional burdens are imposed upon the cotton grower. The costs of the necessities of life are increased. Lumber, glass, shingles, brick, cement, hoes, leather, and many other articles are transferred from the free list to the dutiable list. There have been additional increases in the duties on furniture, the necessities of life, including food, clothing, and medicine, glassware, tables and kitchen furniture, rope, carpets, woolen, cotton, and rayon cloth. The tariff on sugar has been increased. The act carries a small duty on hides, but an unconscionable compensatory duty on shoes and leather. A tariff on long-staple cotton would have helped. It would have been of benefit to the district I represent. It is denied in the House bill.

THE SOLUTION

What is the solution? A tariff on short-staple cotton, wheat, and corn is not effective. The prices of these commodities can not be controlled by tariff. There is a tariff to-day of 42 cents a bushel on wheat and yet wheat is now selling at 96½ cents a bushel, which is the lowest price since 1914. In Canada, without a tariff on wheat, the price is 10½ cents more per bushel than in Chicago, the greatest American grain market. Growers of these crops must compete with the farmers of the world. There should be a national tariff policy that is fair to both industry and agriculture.

Many of the rates in the proposed bill are prohibitive. Retaliatory tariffs will result and our world trade will suffer. The remedy is a reasonable tariff. As a matter of theory, every article that is imported should pay a reasonable duty. Foreign manufacturers and foreign producers should contribute to the expenses of the Government. However, the interest of all the people is frequently promoted by the goods and products, and especially raw material, not produced or raised in this country, coming in duty free. We need coffee, rubber, and a vast percentage of the hides used in the manufacture of shoes. Sixty to seventy-five per cent of our cotton is exported. We need the markets of the world. Some 500,000 bales of cotton are imported annually. In the long run it is difficult to see how a tariff on short-staple cotton would be of much benefit to the grower. We have some twenty-five or thirty millions of dollars invested abroad. Our late war allies owe us $10,000,000,000. As I have said they can only pay us in goods or services.

High tariff walls mean further reduction in foreign debts. These reductions, if the high-protection policy continues, will be of benefit to cotton growers, who must sell their raw cotton abroad. As far as possible, the American market must be preserved to the domestic grower and manufacturer. It is the best market in the world. Embargoes and prohibitive tariffs in the long view are short sighted. The remedy is, the fair thing is, as between the manufacturer and the producer of the great agricultural commodities, a reasonable tariff, an honest tariff, a tariff that will not be too burdensome to the consumer. The solution of the problem is a just and necessary tariff. It is important to the Nation that there should be a thriving agricultural population. At the same time there must be a fair and just protection for American wage scales and standards of living, coupled with provisions for international trade that will benefit America as well as other countries.

There should be no unnecessary trade barriers. I believe that there should be reasonable protection for American industries subject to destructive competition from abroad where there is benefit to any considerable section of the country.

President Hoover advocated a limited revision of the tariff, primarily in aid of agriculture. The House bill, now pending in the Senate, is a monstrosity. There are tariffs that will benefit certain farmers, but the benefits are more than offset by the increased costs of living and production. Costs of living will probably be increased some $600,000,000. For every dollar the pending tariff bill increases the farmer's price it will take from him from ten to fifty dollars.

It was conservatively estimated that the Fordney-McCumber Act increased the price of farm products some $30,000,000, while it added to their cost of production some $330,000,000. These are the figures of the American Farm Bureau Federation. The losses under the pending bill will be double the losses under the tariff act of 1922. A prohibitive tariff, an unjust tariff, is now one of the greatest obstacles to an economically sane and balanced agriculture.

FALLACIES

I have already referred to a number of fallacies that obtain with respect to the tariff.

While a high tariff will enable the employer to pay a higher wage, the chief benefit is to the employer. American standards of wages have always been higher than in the old country. Adam Smith, writing in 1773, said that the wages of labor were higher in America at that time than in England. The versatile Sidney Smith, the first editor of the Edinburgh Review, in speaking of the Book of Fallacies, by Jeremy Bentham, said:

There are a vast number of absurd and mischievous fallacies which pass readily in the world for sense and virtue, while in truth they tend only to fortify error and encourage crime.

Labor organizations have promoted working conditions. American workmen receive higher wages because of labor unions and not because of the tariff. The highest wages in the United States are not paid by the industries that enjoy the highest tariff protection, but in lines of trade not directly or indirectly related to the tariff. Bricklayers, carpenters, and stonemasons receive among the highest wages. These workmen are not protected by tariff laws. At the same time the American workman receives almost twice as much as the European workman engaged in the same trade that is not protected by a tariff.

Again, under the lowest tariff in the United States wages have always been higher than they were in Europe. America receives higher wages, and, by reason of superior intelligence, greater efficiency, and vision of the American laborer and manufacturers, they will ultimately achieve a world-wide mastery in the domain of industry and ultimately largely control the markets of the world, whether or not we have a high or moderate tariff system.

In the United States we have not the overpopulation; there is not the supply of labor that there is in Europe. We have restricted immigration now.

SPECIAL INTERESTS AND LOGROLLING

I oppose the pending tariff bill because it grants to manufacturing special favors. It increases the cost of living. It is carrying the doctrine of protection to unreasonable extremes. It is for the benefit of the classes rather than of the masses. It is the result of trading and logrolling. The special interests agree to enough duties to pass the bill, and on articles that do not interfere with their profits.

The first tariff act of 1789 carried an average ad valorem rate of 8 per cent. The tariff act of 1922 carried a rate of 37.67 per cent. It is estimated that the tariff act of 1929 carries a rate of approximately 48 per cent. The purpose is no longer to equalize costs or to promote competition. The aim is the prevention of imports.

There are vast increases in the rates in the present bill. The tariff wall is raised. The argument is that the manufacturer will be made prosperous and that prosperity will trickle down to the wage earners and farmers of the country. This has always been the argument of aristocracy. This has always been the claim of the classes.

The tariff act of 1929 increases the duties on every article, from the cradle to the grave. The dresses of the baby, the dolls and toys of the child, the clothing and necessities of life are vastly increased. Duties on tombstones are higher than ever before.

I wish that wages might be increased throughout the world. High wages do not always follow protective tariffs. Russia has protection, with low wages. England, with free trade, had higher wages than Germany with high tariffs. The remedy for inadequate wages in all countries is not higher tariffs but increased efficiency. Higher wages mean greater buying power.

America won the war, and if our tariff walls are further increased, America is likely to pay the remaining cost of the war. A nation can not be enriched by its own taxation. Permanent prosperity can not result from enriching the few at the expense of the many. The tariff act of 1929 embodies the principle of the Irishman at Donnybrook Fair: "Whenever you see a head, hit it; whenever you use a commodity, tax it."

With increased tariffs on manufactures, the added duties on farm products are in reality a delusion. The pending bill can not be stripped of its injustice and inequality by giving to the farmer a stone when he asks for bread.

If the manufacturer is entitled to a tariff, the farmer is entitled to a bounty, or its equivalent. The American people seem to forgive robbery if that robbery be indirect. We illustrate Shakespeare's theory:

He who's robbed but knows not of it,
Is not robbed at all.

NATIONAL EQUALITY

The view of Alexander Hamilton, the father of protection, was that the protective policy would cause the price of goods to be lower and not higher than they would be if no protection had been accorded. The fundamental purpose of a constructive protection is to stimulate domestic production by eliminating foreign competition or rendering it less effective. The raising of prices is a resulting aim. The extreme protectionist may demand the practical elimination of foreign competition supplemented by the raising of domestic prices to the full extent of the duty. I maintain, however, that such is not the general view of the American people. Price raising is only a proximate aim. The primary aim is to stimulate domestic production, so that prices will not continue to be raised as much as at first, with the eventual purpose that prices may be lower than if no protection were accorded.

Industrial tariffs should be aimed to increase the volume and variety of manufactures, rather than the prosperity of the manufacturers themselves. The policy of protection is being distorted. Tariff aims are being subverted. Prosperity in different industries does not depend upon the amount of tariff protection or upon the amount of protective duties. The rubber and automobile industries, with but little protection, have prospered, while textile manufactures, with high protection, are lagging behind.

Equality between industry and agriculture means the elimination of prohibitive duties, the promotion of competition, and the encouragement of trade and commerce that will promote the progress of both manufacturing and agriculture.

Mr. LEA of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the tariff bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

FIFTY-NINE YEARS OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Mr. LEA of California. Mr. Speaker, the tariff law is our international trade law. It vastly affects both our domestic and foreign commerce. It may create or destroy markets. It may powerfully promote, regulate, restrict, or prohibit the international interchange of commodities. Nearly every country in the world is on a protective-tariff basis. By this means the nations choose what imports they shall permit from other nations and give legal protection to their own industries by restricting or prohibiting foreign competition. Whether they encourage or prohibit imports of any given product, the motive is the same—their own welfare. This means that American products enter the other markets of the world on terms prescribed by other nations. Their laws in following that practice are based upon the same rightful foundation as our own.

STATISTICAL TABLE

In 1921 I placed in the Record a comparative statistical history of the principal tariff acts since 1870. Under leave granted, I am now placing in the Record a similar table covering all the principal tariff acts of the last 59 years. This table has been brought to date by the Tariff Commission and the complete table has been rechecked and verified by experts of the commission and I am sure it gives the most reliable statistics available.

This table shows the state of our trade under each of the principal tariff acts of that period. It should be observed that it deals primarily with the periods under the various tariff acts rather than with any particular year.

It is, of course, recognized that while the tariff is a very great factor in foreign trade, it is nevertheless only one of many influential factors that determine price levels and trade movements at any given period or as to any given product. The object of presenting the table is to show the general results rather than to reach any dogmatic conclusion as to the causes.

Certain general standards have been commonly accepted which may aid us in determining the state of health of our foreign trade. We naturally inquire as to the trade trends, the volume of our foreign commerce, the balance of trade, the relation of exports to imports, the percentage of free imports, the average rates of dutiable imports, and the revenue collected. This table is intended to give a perspective view of some of these fundamental facts under the tariff acts of the last 59 years. During the period covered there have been nine general tariff revisions. The average duration of a general tariff act has been six and one-half years. Changing economic and political conditions have resulted in readjustment of rates at frequent intervals. Political convenience, as well as stability of trade, has resulted in a practice of general rather than piecemeal revision. The denial of piecemeal revision has hastened general revision.

PRINCIPAL TARIFF ACTS

The principal tariff acts of the last 50 years have been enacted as follows:

July 14, 1870; June 6, 1872; March 3, 1883; October 1, 1890 (McKinley Act); August 27, 1894 (Wilson Act); July 24, 1897 (Dingley Act); August 5, 1909 (Payne Act); October 3, 1913 (Underwood Act); and September 22, 1922 (Fordney-McCumber Act).

VOLUME OF TRADE

The above table shows that under the tariff act of 1870 our average annual volume of trade was $1,000,000,000. This table discloses the general upward trend of the volume of trade through the tariff acts from 1870 to the present time. The one exception in this trend was the Wilson Act of 1894, under which our average annual volume of trade decreased $40,000,000. The average decrease under the Wilson Act was due to a drop of imports from a level reached under the McKinley Act of 1890. Imports were on an average $18,000,000 per year less under the Wilson Act than under the McKinley Act. The volume of exports under the Wilson Act was greater than under the McKinley Act. The result under the Wilson Act was a decreased volume of trade but an increased balance of trade.

The great average increases in our volume of trade have occurred under the acts of 1897, 1909, and 1913, covering the period from 1897 to 1922. During this 25-year period our trade increased from less than $2,000,000,000 a year to more than $8,000,000,000. An enormous jump was made under the Underwood Act, manifestly primarily due to war conditions. The average volume of trade under the Payne Act of 1909 was $3,753,000,000. The average volume of trade under the Underwood Act of 1913 was $8,102,000,000. The average annual volume of trade under the Underwood Act was 115 per cent greater than under the Payne Act, which preceded it.

The peak volume of trade was reached in the fiscal year 1920, when our foreign trade amounted to $13,347,000,000, with a balance of trade amounting to $2,870,000,000. Within one year this volume of trade had fallen $3,177,000,000. From 1921 to 1922 it still further fell $3,790,000,000, which left us a volume of trade of $6,379,000,000, the lowest for the last 10 years. Then the present act went into effect.

The exports for the fiscal year 1920 amounted to over $74 per capita and the imports to $47 per capita. In other words, we enjoyed an excess of exports over imports of $27 per head for every man, woman, and child in America. In 1921 our exports amounted to over $39 per capita, with imports amounting to $23. In 1922 our exports amounted to $33.75 per capita and our imports to $27.55, or a net balance of $6.20 per capita.

This tremendous drop in our volume of trade within 24 months amounted to over $6,960,000,000. It was not induced by the inability of America to produce and sell. It was the result of the inability of our customers, particularly Europe, to buy. This abrupt and tremendous slump in our foreign market is a sufficient reason, and perhaps the main reason, to account for the beginning of our economic depression of eight years ago. American agriculture, with its market cut off, found itself the first to suffer from the depression. Agriculture received the shock of a greatly curtailed market without a concurrent reduction in production—a decrease in prices without a corresponding decrease in costs.

The total balance of trade in favor of the United States under the Underwood Act during the nine years it was in effect was about twenty billions of dollars. That tremendous volume and balance of trade largely resulted from American financing during and following the war, both by Government and private loans. The Government financed Europe with war supplies on specific condition that funds should be used for purchases in America. Private capitalists found it advantageous to loan money to our foreign customers in the same way. This vast expansion of credit and the resulting trade made America the creditor nation of the world. The financial supremacy of America originated in this tremendous balance of trade under the Underwood Act, not predominantly produced by that particular law but out of the economic conditions under which the trade originated.

Since 1922 American business men have continued to finance our foreign trade by making foreign loans and investments aggregating over $1,000,000,000 per year. We still have a large volume of trade, materially induced and financed by loans. An interchange of commodities is a natural and most substantial foundation for healthy trade, and we can not regard our present large volume of commerce, so largely dependent on current loans, as affording the most secure foundation for the continuance of this favorable volume of trade.

Our average annual volume of trade under the present tariff act is $700,000,000 per year greater than the average volume of trade under the Underwood Act, an increase of 8 per cent.

IMPORTS

The minimum imports under the tariff acts of the last 60 years occurred under the act of 1870. The imports have increased under every tariff act since that time, except the Wilson Act of 1894 under the Cleveland administration. The average annual decrease of imports under that act, as compared with the preceding McKinley Act, was $18,000,000.

The big increases in imports have occurred under the acts of 1909, 1913, and 1922, being the three last tariff acts. Under the act of 1909, 7 per cent more commodities came in free than under the preceding act and the average duty was over 6 per cent less. Under the Underwood Act the free list was increased 16 per cent, and the average duty was decreased about 14 per cent. The average volume of trade increased $4,350,000,000, and consisted of an increase of $1,250,000,000 imports and $3,100,000,000 exports.

Under the act of 1922 the dutiable rates were raised 10.87 per cent, 63 per cent came in free, there was an 8 per cent increase in our volume of trade and a decrease in our balance of trade as compared with the act of 1913. The $700,000,000 average in our balance of trade for the period of the present act is made up of increased imports and decreased exports.

Under the present tariff law, average imports have increased $1,150,000,000 per year and average exports have decreased $450,000,000 per year.

This does not fully tell the story, however. The first year of the present act was at the low swing of our trade pendulum. It went into effect under depressed market conditions and comparing its first year with 1927 we find that exports have increased $1,000,000,000 and imports $470,000,000.

The highest average annual imports were reached under the present act, $4,022,000,000 per year or $34.13 per capita of our population. These imports aggregate $1,150,000,000 more per year than the average under the Underwood Act. They represent imports of practically $6.85 per capita for every person in the United States per year in excess of the imports under the Underwood Act. The average per capita balance of trade under the present law has been $5.35, as compared to $21.21 under the Underwood Act. The per capita balance of trade under the last year of the Underwood Act was $6.20.

From the standpoint of protection, the question is whether or not we are adequately preserving the American market for the American producer. Considered from this general standpoint, the question is not so much the question of the amount of imports as the relation of imports to exports. We sell when it is to our advantage, we buy when it is to our advantage. We gain in both transactions. If our sales exceed our purchases, we secure a larger market for domestic labor and materials than we surrendered to our foreign customers.

We gave a market to our imported products; we enjoyed a greater market for our exports. If our imports are large and our exports correspondingly larger, the fact that we have large imports must be regarded as a favorable instead of an unfavorable condition of trade. When imports displace domestic industry to the aggregate reduction of American industry, we face a situation that makes protective legislation a necessary remedy.

BALANCE OF TRADE

The first 52 years of the country, up to about 1842, produced an adverse balance of trade. For the succeeding 52 years, we had an adverse or a comparatively small balance of trade. Under the last year of the Wilson Act we had a balance of trade of $286,000,000, the largest in our history up to that time. That year may be said to mark the beginning of the period of large balances of trade. Under the Dingley Act, which was in effect for 12 years following the Wilson Act, we had an average balance of trade of $506,000,000. We have had no adverse balances of trade for any year since the McKinley Act. The last adverse balance of trade occurred under that act in 1893 and amounted to $18,000,000.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, following the enactment of the Underwood Act on the 3d of the preceding October, the balance of trade in our favor was $470,000,000. This balance was $8,000,000 less than the average balance under the Payne law and was over $182,000,000 less than the balance of the preceding year and represented increased imports amounting to about $81,000,000 and decreased exports amounting to about $101,000,000. The balance of trade under the last year of the Payne Act was $102,000,000 greater than any former balance of trade in the history of the country up to that time.

The second year of the Underwood Act, the first year of the World War, produced a balance of trade in our favor of $1,094,000,000.

The balance of trade in favor of the United States under the last year of the Underwood Act was $1,160,000,000. Under the first year of the present tariff act the balance was $175,774,000. This balance represented an increase of imports over the last year of the Underwood Act amounting to $570,000,000 and increased exports of $185,000,000. During the second year of the present law, the imports decreased about $226,000,000 and exports increased about $355,000,000, resulting in a balance of about $758,000,000.

The average annual balance of trade under the Underwood Act for the eight years of its existence was $2,279,000,000. The average annual balance of trade for the seven years under the present tariff act has been $689,000,000. Thus, the average balance of trade under the Underwood Act was $1,590,000,000 greater than under the present tariff act. Last year we had exports of a little over $5,000,000,000 and imports of a little over $4,000,000,000.

This difference in the balance of trade under these two acts is reflected in the imports per capita under the two acts. The average imports per capita under the Underwood Act were $27.28, while the average imports per capita under the present act are $34.13. The present act shows we still have a balance of trade as favorable as healthy conditions of international trade would suggest as desirable. The enormous balance of trade under the Underwood Act reflected an unhealthy, abnormal condition of trade, too favorable to be placed on an enduring foundation. Even our present balance of trade and volume of trade, so largely induced by foreign loans, reflect abnormal conditions that lack that stable, enduring foundation which we should desire on which to rest a successful foreign trade over a long period of years.

"INVISIBLE" AND OTHER INTERCHANGES

The Tariff Commission has also furnished an estimate of the total invisible items consisting of tourists' expenditures, ocean-freight payments, and immigration remittances that affect the actual trade balances between this and foreign countries. The earliest statistics available are for 1919 to 1921, inclusive, and are based on studies made by Harvard University. It is estimated that these items of foreign expenditures for that period average $660,000,000 per year. It is further estimated that from 1922 to January 1, 1928, the average annual expenditures of that class amounted to $765,000,000 per year.

It is estimated that from 1919 to 1921 the average annual net interest on foreign investments amounted to $60,000,000 per year, and since that period—up to 1928—the interest on foreign investments has averaged $449,000,000 per year.

It is still further estimated that the average annual net increases of long-term American investments abroad amount to $734,000,000 per year.

These items are based on estimates as contrasted with certain specific information, but are of such reliability as to largely demonstrate a greater equality of interchange between these other nations than the mere statistics of trade disclose.

FREE IMPORTS

The fourth column of the above table shows the average per cent of imports admitted free of duty under these various tariff acts. There has been a rather steady trend of free imports from 8.19 per cent under the act of 1870 to 66.28 per cent under the Underwood Act. The percentage of free imports under the present act is 63.23. This percentage of free imports under the Underwood Act was the highest of the last 60 years. It was only 3.5 per cent higher than under the existing tariff act.

This table shows a strong tendency to increase free imports ever since 1872. Notable increases of 21 per cent were made under the act of 1872, over 19 per cent under the McKinley Act of 1890, and about 14 per cent under the Underwood Act of 1913. Percentage decreases of free imports occurred only under the Wilson Act, the Dingley Act, and the present law. Thus decreases of free imports occurred only under three of these nine tariff acts.

Approximately two-thirds of all imports into the United States during the last 16 years have been admitted free of duty. Free imports exceeded dutiable imports first under the McKinley Act in 1890 when 52.45 per cent were admitted free. In other words, over half of our imports came in free of duty under that act; 49.45 per cent came in free under the Wilson Act; free imports were reduced to 45 per cent under the act of 1897, and beginning with the act of 1909 over half of all imports have come in free of duty.

AD VALOREM RATES

The ad valorem rates of duty on dutiable imports maintained a substantial level from 1870 to 1913, a period of 43 years. The average duty under the various acts covering this period was 43.95 per cent. The lowest duty collected under any act of this period was under the Payne Act of 1909 and amounted to 40.77 per cent. The next lowest duty collected was under the Wilson Act in the Cleveland administration, when the average duty collected was 41.58 per cent.

The rates of duty collected under the tariff act of the Cleveland administration, as compared with other tariff acts, are particularly interesting, inasmuch as that act has received widespread denunciation as a "free trade act." Even to this day, 32 years after that act was repealed, politicians describe it as a "free trade act," under which imports "flooded" American markets to the exclusion of American products. The facts give little support to this charge. The average duties under this act were only 2.37 per cent lower than the average under the acts of the 43-year period following 1870.

The average imports per capita under the Wilson Act were lowest of any tariff act of the last 60 years, being only $10.72 per capita. The average imports per capita for the 43-year period was $12.55, or $1.83 higher than the average imports under the Wilson Act.

The Dingley Act, following the Wilson Act, increased rates 6 per cent and decreased free imports 4 per cent. During the 12 years of its existence there was an average balance of trade of $500,000,000 per year.

Then followed the Payne Act, under which rates were reduced over 6 per cent and free imports were increased about 7 per cent. Under this act our volume of trade increased $1,200,000,000 and our imports increased $620,000,000. The average balance of trade was $28,000,000 less per year than under the former act.

Then in 1913 came the Underwood Act, under which dutiable rates were decreased 14 per cent and free imports increased 14 per cent. The war came and our volume of trade increased $4,450,000,000, imports increased $1,200,000,000, and our average balance of trade became $2,280,000,000.

Under the act of 1922 we increased the dutiable rate 11 per cent and decreased free imports 3 per cent. Our average volume of trade increased $700,000,000 per year over the average of the Underwood Act and our imports increased $1,150,000,000. Our average balance of trade has been $450,000,000 less than the last annual balance of trade under the Underwood Act. During the last year the balance of trade was over $1,000,000,000, or about $100,000,000 less than the last year of the Underwood Act.

The highest tariff act of the last 60 years was the McKinley Act, under which the average duties were 48.63. The next highest act was the Dingley Act with duties at 46.62. The McKinley Act was in effect during a period of depressed prices. The Dingley Act was in effect under more favorable economic conditions. These two acts, substantially the same in rates, furnish a contrast as to results in favor of the Dingley Act.

Under the act of 1909, with its decreased duties and increased free imports, our volume of trade expanded greatly and left our balance of trade substantially the same as under the former act. The Underwood Act, with its greatly reduced rates and increased free imports, is so closely associated with the war period as to be unsatisfactory as a basis of comparison. Its generally favorable volume of trade and balance of trade were beyond what could be hoped for in any tariff act under normal conditions.

Ad valorem rates under the present tariff act have been equivalent to 37.84 per cent. This is the lowest rate collected under any tariff act of the last 50 years, with the exception of the Underwood Act. This rate is 6 per cent lower than the average rate of all tariff acts of this period prior to 1913. We have heard frequent references to the existing tariff act as being "the highest in our history," but this statement is not supported by the facts, as eight of the last nine acts have had higher rates than the present law.

A large volume of trade and large balance of trade have resulted under our present tariff act. Last year we had $5,000,000,000 of exports and $4,000,000,000 of imports. This status of our trade is itself still largely affected by the abnormal conditions growing out of the war.

An examination of these rates of duty in comparison with the trade during the last 40 years indicates that notwithstanding these high and fluctuating rates, economic conditions have powerfully influenced our international trade.

POLITICAL CONTRASTS

Of the nine general tariff acts written in this 59-year period, seven were enacted under Republican administrations and two under Democratic administrations. The first Democratic measure was enacted under Cleveland in 1894 and was in effect for three years. The second was the Underwood Act, enacted under the Wilson administration in 1913, and was in effect for nine years. The statistical history of the operation of these tariff acts fails to show decisively different results that the average American would expect to find. If there is any surprising contrast between results under Democratic and Republican tariff legislation, it is in the fact that a higher percentage of the American market has been enjoyed by the American producer under Democratic than under Republican tariff laws. In other words, there has been a higher percentage of imports under Republican than under Democratic tariff laws. Considered as a whole, the first Democratic tariff act was a high-tariff measure. It was in effect during the last half of a trade depression. The second Democratic tariff act prescribed the most moderate rates of all tariff acts of the last 60 years. Abnormally favorable balances of trade occurred under that act, even up to the last year of its existence.

Many will contend that a larger import trade would induce a still larger export trade with a corresponding advantage to American enterprise. That is what happened under the Underwood Act, but under such conditions as to neither prove nor disprove such contention. The abnormal conditions under that act preclude any safe basis of comparison of the effect of its general rate level on trade as contrasted with similar rate levels under peace-time conditions of commerce.

We deal upon a protection tariff plan of prices. Any revision of our tariff must have regard to our established industries. The value of trade expansion involving increases of both exports and imports must depend upon the prudence with which a line is drawn between legitimate and uneconomic industries. The value of the trade must be measured by the general public interest and accordingly encouraged or restricted.

It seems safe to assume that any general lowering of rates sufficient to induce largely increased imports, though correspondingly increased exports might result, would, during the period of readjustment, involve discouragements to industries built up under and dependent upon the protective system. The more radical the changes that might be made, the greater would be the economic disturbance by tariff readjustments.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 1913 the total international commerce moving between the nations of the world amounted to $41,000,000,000. In 1922 this world commerce amounted to $46,000,000,000. In 1927 international trade was $65,000,000,000. America has about $9,000,000,000 of this commerce. In 1913 the United States had about one-tenth of the world trade. In 1920 we had about one-fourth of the world trade and now we have about one-seventh. The relative gain in our proportion of the world trade in 1920 was undoubtedly due to the economic impairment of our competitor nations during and following the World War. During the last seven years, though we have had an increased volume of exports and imports, our relative position in world trade has been decreasing in view of the rapid economic recovery of Europe. The large market America is furnishing for imported products, $4,000,000,000 per year, has contributed materially to that economic recovery. At the same time, the large exports we have marketed with them has contributed to our favorable advance in trade.

EXPORTS AND IMPORTS PER CAPITA

Columns showing exports and imports per capita give a more concrete and understandable index to our international trade. These two columns reduce the question of international trade to its simplest terms. We trace exports from $13.53 per capita in 1890 to $39.48 per capita under the act of 1922. We contrast that with imports of $11.73 per capita in 1890 and imports of $34.13 per capita under the act of 1922 and we get a good understanding of the increased extent to which we have become a market for foreign products, the increased extent to which other countries are taking our products in proportion to population and the increased balance of trade that has resulted to our country. We find that the least per capita imports of the last 60 years were under the Wilson Act and amounted to $10.72 and that the greatest average imports per capita were under the present act, amounting $34.13.

We find that under the first of these acts, the balance of trade per capita was only $1.80 and under the second of these acts the balance of this trade per capita was $5.33. Therefore, we conclude that notwithstanding the much greater imports per capita, on the whole America gained by the increased trade.

DUTIES COLLECTED

This table shows that the least duties collected under any of these tariff acts was under the Wilson Act, and amounted to $150,000,000 per year. The greatest amount was collected under the present act, amounting to an average of $559,000,000 per year.

With the adopting of the income tax 16 years ago, followed by the World War, customs duties ceased to be a major source of Federal revenue, yet the present income is over $200,000,000 greater than in any former act. A change in these revenues is not a motive for the present revision.

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak for one minute to make a statement preliminary to making a unanimous-consent request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Speaker, there was messaged over from the Senate a bill (S. 1452) now on the Speaker's table. It is a bill authorizing the State of West Virginia to take over two bridges authorized by the last Congress to be constructed by private parties and to complete their construction as State bridges. Authority was given by the last Congress to private individuals to construct the bridges, and the State desires to finish their construction and make them free bridges as soon as possible. This bill authorizes the State so to do.

I think it is a matter of public interest that the bill should be passed. I have submitted it to the other members of the subcommittee on bridges in the last Congress, and it is agreeable to them. I have also submitted it to the majority and the minority leaders and informed them of the contents of the bill, and it seems to be agreeable to them. I therefore ask unanimous consent that the bill may be taken from the Speaker's table and considered by the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Reserving the right to object, this is not an omnibus bill, but it is for the two bridges mentioned by the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. DENISON. It authorizes the State to take over the two bridges and finish their construction.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Reserving the right to object, has construction commenced on these bridges?

Mr. DENISON. Yes; they are being constructed or are to be constructed by private concerns; they are to be toll bridges, and the State wants to make them free bridges as soon as possible.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Has sufficient investigation been made to determine whether or not the State will be held up by these private concerns who received the franchise at the last session?

Mr. DENISON. The State officials of West Virginia are purchasing these bridges, and I assume that they know what is just and what is right, and they merely want the authority to do this in order to complete the bridges and make them free as soon as possible.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Has the committee consulted the Member of Congress representing the district where these bridges are to be constructed?

Mr. DENISON. Yes; he is right by the side of the gentleman.

Mr. HUGHES. One of them is in my district, and the other is in the district of my colleague [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The gentleman does not think there will be any undue exploitation by the parties who had the franchise?

Mr. HUGHES. No; there will not be any exploitation. It is perfectly satisfactory all around.

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, I would like to inquire of the gentleman for information—Has Congress heretofore at any time incorporated the provision for maintenance as part of section 5 which relates to the method the State of West Virginia shall pursue in case tolls are charged and in wiping out the cost by amortization or otherwise? Have they enacted similar provisions in previous legislation?

Mr. DENISON. That provision is put in every bridge bill coming from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Mr. STAFFORD. That was not the practice several years ago.

Mr. DENISON. No; since the gentleman has been out of Congress this provision has been inserted in all such bills and is now the customary provision.

Mr. GARNER. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. This bill, if I understand the gentleman, has been examined and has the approval of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DENISON], the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. BURTNESS], and the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. PARKS]?

Mr. DENISON. I have spoken to each of those gentlemen, and they approve it.

Mr. GARNER. And they constituted in the last Congress the subcommittee on bridges?

Mr. DENISON. Yes.

Mr. DOWELL. Has this matter been submitted to the Bureau of Roads?

Mr. DENISON. I am unable to advise the gentleman in that particular. This is a Senate bill, and it is on the Speaker's table. The bill authorizes the State of West Virginia to take over these bridges and complete their construction and make them State bridges.

Mr. DOWELL. And then they are to become free bridges upon the payment of the cost?

Mr. DENISON. Exactly.

Mr. DOWELL. And both of those, as I understand it, are to be taken over by the State of West Virginia?

Mr. DENISON. Yes.

Mr. DOWELL. And when the State completes them, when the money is returned again to the State, they are to be free bridges.

Mr. DENISON. Yes.

Mr. DOWELL. And that is the provision in the bill?

Mr. DENISON. That is true.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the State of West Virginia, by its State bridge commission, be, and is hereby, authorized to acquire, maintain, and operate the bridge being erected over the Kanawha River at Cabin Creek and the approaches thereto in said State, and that said bridge shall be deemed a lawful structure if constructed in accordance with the plans and location approved by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War under dates of April 20, 1928, and April 23, 1928, respectively, and in accordance with an act approved May 1, 1928, authorizing the construction of said bridge by the Cabin Creek Kanawha Bridge Co., its successors and assigns.

SEC. 2. The State of West Virginia, by its State bridge commission, is authorized to acquire the right to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge over the Kanawha River at St. Albans, in said State, and the approaches thereto under an act approved May 1, 1928, authorizing the St. Albans Nitro Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate said bridge, and said bridge shall be a lawful structure if constructed in accordance with the plans and location approved by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War under dates of May 14, 1928, and May 19, 1928, respectively, and in accordance with the last mentioned act.

SEC. 3. Both of said bridges shall be subject to the conditions and limitations of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, other than those requiring the approval of plans, specifications, and location by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War before the commencement of construction.

SEC. 4. The times for commencing and completing the construction of the said bridge at or near St. Albans are hereby extended one and three years, respectively, from the date of approval hereof.

SEC. 5. If tolls are charged for the use of said bridges, the rates of toll shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridges under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the amount paid by the State for the bridge at or near Cabin Creek and the cost to the State of constructing the bridge at or near St. Albans, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 25 years from the completion of the bridge at or near St. Albans. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, the two bridges shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridges and their approaches under economical management.

SEC. 6. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

DECEASED ALABAMA SOLDIERS IN PERMANENT EUROPEAN CEMETERIES

Mr. OLIVER of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD as a part of my remarks the names of World War veterans of the State of Alabama who are buried in the cemeteries of France.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama renews his request that he may print in the RECORD the names of World War veterans of the State of Alabama who are buried in France. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection made a moment ago.

There was no objection.

Mr. OLIVER of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, no single act of Congress has been so universally approved as the one directing the Secretary of War to arrange for the mothers and widows of members of the military forces of the United States who are buried in permanent European cemeteries to make pilgrimages to such cemeteries at Government expense during the period from May 1, 1930, to October 31, 1933.

I wish to insert the names of those immortal sons of Alabama who made the supreme sacrifice for their country and whose remains are interred in the American cemeteries abroad.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New York [Mr. CLARKE] may be permitted to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing therein a speech delivered by himself, together with certain newspaper comments on the attitude of the farm organizations toward Mr. CLARKE's support of President Hoover.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, I object to the printing of newspaper articles.

Mr. CANNON. They are just a few small paragraphs.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MOREHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the addresses enumerated already I be permitted to address the House to-morrow for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 20 minutes to-morrow at the conclusion of the other addresses.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SENATE ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled joint resolution of the Senate of the following title:

S. J. Res. 50. Joint resolution to provide for the observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski.

CONSTRUCTION OF CERTAIN BRIDGES

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table another bill with reference to the construction of bridges. Last week the Senate passed a bill, which I may call an omnibus bridge bill, which extends the time for beginning and completing the construction of a number of bridges that were authorized during the last Congress.

Under the general bridge law, where Congress grants a franchise to build a bridge, the franchise expires by law unless the construction of the bridge is begun within one year and completed within three years from the approval of the act. Sometimes it requires several months to present the plans for a bridge and have them approved by the War Department, so that the time may expire before they have opportunity to begin construction of the bridge. In such cases they have to come back to Congress and get the time for beginning the construction extended for a year.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, has this bill been considered by a committee of the House?

Mr. DENISON. This bill was considered by the Senate Committee on Commerce, and as a matter of convenience they passed this omnibus bill extending the times for beginning and completing several bridges. The bill is now on the Speaker's table.

Mr. DYER. What is the emergency about this before next December?

Mr. DENISON. I am told by Members of the Senate who are interested in these bills that they are anxious to begin the construction of these bridges, and they want to do that this summer while the weather is good. They can not do it in the wintertime. I have no personal information regarding the local conditions connected with any of the bridges.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri objects.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. VINSON of Georgia, by unanimous consent, was granted leave of absence for two weeks, on account of important business.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Flag Day, which falls on to-morrow, I may extend a portion of my own remarks on Flag Day in the RECORD; my own remarks.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to extend his own remarks on the subject of Flag Day. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

FARM RELIEF

Mr. O'CONNOR of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent to address the House for one minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—and I do not intend to object—the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. TILSON] the other day in a conversation suggested that before unanimous-consent requests to address the House are granted an inquiry should be made as to what subject, by me on this side and by the gentleman from Connecticut on that side.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Oklahoma. I will say to the gentleman that I was unavoidably detained, and I desire to announce that if I had been present when the motion to instruct the conferees on the farm relief bill was voted on I would have voted "aye." I was unavoidably detained.

LISTS OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS BURIED IN EUROPE

Mr. BACHMANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a letter containing the names of West Virginia soldiers and sailors who are buried in the cemeteries in Europe.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, it is apparent that there will be numerous requests from Members from various States to insert such lists. Will there be duplication of such lists presented by Members of either body, or will Members from each State submit such lists?

Mr. BACHMANN. I have not made inquiry as to that.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I can see that there will be other requests coming from Members representing other States to print these lists, and if objection were to be made here they no doubt would be inserted in the other body. The Members and Senators should act in unity and prevent a duplication.

Mr. BACHMANN. I do not know of any Member from my State who is making such a request.

Mr. GARNER. Why not ask for every State in the Union? I understand there have been a considerable number of requests for the preparation of such lists. I think the lists should be set out in the shape of a public document or published in the RECORD, including all the States.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. That is what I had in mind.

Mr. PARKS. May I ask the gentleman if that is a list of those who died overseas?

Mr. BACHMANN. Yes.

Mr. PARKS. The department told me this morning that they were making up lists requested by individual Members.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think this should be done in the shape of a public document. I was about to ask permission to submit a list for the State of Georgia, but I think it would be to the interest of the country at large to have the lists published all in one document.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. That can hardly be done until we know what the expense would be.

Mr. TILSON. It seems to me that we might well wait until the whole list is prepared. It is a good idea, but it ought not to be authorized until all the lists are completed.

Mr. BACHMANN. I want to insist on this list being placed in the RECORD at this time because I have made arrangements to have copies sent to people in my State. I have no objection to the suggestion of the gentleman as to the general matter of public policy.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

LIST OF DECEASED SOLDIERS FROM WEST VIRGINIA BURIED IN AMERICAN CEMETERIES IN EUROPE

Mr. BACHMANN. Mr. Speaker, during the Seventieth Congress a law was passed making provision for pilgrimages to the European cemeteries by mothers and widows of the members of the military and naval forces of the United States whose remains rest there. These pilgrimages are to be made at the expense of the United States Government.

Cheatham, has furnished me a list of the deceased of the American military forces from the State of West Virginia, including the names, organizations, and grave locations of those who served in the World War and whose remains are interred over there.

1 Kerfautas Cemetery, Brest, France.

The act referred to is as follows:

PUBLIC, NO. 352, SEVENTIETH CONGRESS
S. 5332

An act to enable the mothers and widows of the deceased soldiers, sailors, and marines of the American forces now interred in the cemeteries of Europe to make a pilgrimage to these cemeteries

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to arrange for pilgrimages to cemeteries in Europe by mothers and widows of members of the military or naval forces of the United States who died in the military or naval service at any time between April 5, 1917, and July 1, 1921, and whose remains are now interred in such cemeteries. Such pilgrimages shall be made at the expense of the United States under the conditions set forth in section 2.

SEC. 2. The conditions under which such pilgrimages may be made are as follows:

(a) Invitations to make the pilgrimages shall be extended in the name of the United States to the mothers and widows for whom the pilgrimages are authorized to be arranged under section 1.

(b) Upon acceptance of the invitation the mother or widow shall be entitled to make one such pilgrimage; but no mother or widow who has previous to the pilgrimage visited cemeteries described in section 1 shall be entitled to make any such pilgrimage, and no mother or widow shall be entitled to make more than one such pilgrimage.

(c) The pilgrimages shall be made at such times during the period from May 1, 1930, to October 31, 1933, as may be designated by the Secretary of War.

(d) For the purpose of the pilgrimages the Secretary of State shall (1) issue special passports, limited to the duration of the pilgrimage, to mothers and widows making the pilgrimages and to such personnel as may be selected to accompany and/or arrange for the pilgrimages, if such mothers, widows, and personnel are citizens of the United States, and (2) issue suitable travel documents if aliens. No fee for either of such documents or for any application therefor shall be charged. Such alien mothers, widows, and personnel shall be permitted to return and be granted admission to the United States without regard to any law, convention, or treaty relating to the immigration or exclusion of aliens, if the return is made within the period covered by the pilgrimage of the particular group or, in the case of personnel, within such times as the Secretary of War shall by regulation prescribe; except that in any case of unavoidable detention the Secretary of War may extend in such case the time during which return may be made without regard to such laws, conventions, or treaties.

(e) The pilgrimages shall be by the shortest practicable route and for the shortest practicable time, to be designated by the Secretary of War. No mother or widow shall be provided for at Government expense in Europe for a longer period than two weeks from the time of disembarkation in Europe to the time of reembarkation in Europe. In the case of any mother or widow willfully failing to continue the pilgrimage of her particular group, the United States shall not incur or be subject to any expense with regard to her pilgrimage after such failure.

(f) Vessels owned or operated by the United States Government or any agency thereof shall be used for transportation at sea wherever practicable.

(g) Suitable transportation, accommodations, meals, and other necessities pertaining thereto, as prescribed by the Secretary of War, shall be furnished each mother or widow included in any pilgrimage for the entire distance at sea and on land and while sojourning in Europe and while en route in the United States from home to port and from port to home. Cabin-class accommodations shall be furnished for all transportation at sea. No mother or widow shall be entitled, by reason of any payment made by or for her, to be furnished by the Government with transportation, accommodations, meals, and other necessities pertaining thereto different in kind from those prescribed by the Secretary of War for the pilgrimage of the particular group.

(h) All pilgrimages shall be made in accordance with such regulations as the Secretary of War may from time to time prescribe as to the time, route, itineraries, composition of groups, accommodations, transportation, program, arrangements, management, and other matters pertaining to such pilgrimages.

SEC. 3. There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act. The Secretary of War is directed to make an investigation for the purpose of determining (1) the total numbers of mothers and widows entitled to make the pilgrimages, (2) the number of such mothers and widows who desire to make the pilgrimages and the number who desire to make the pilgrimages during the calendar year 1930, and (3) the probable cost of the pilgrimages to be made. The Secretary of War shall report to the Congress not later than December 15, 1929, the results of such investigation.

SEC. 4. As used in this act—

(a) The term "mother" means mother, stepmother, mother through adoption, or any woman who stood in loco parentis to the deceased member of the military or naval forces for the year prior to the commencement of his service in such forces.

(b) The term "widow" means a widow who has not remarried since the death of the member of the military or naval forces.

Approved, March 2, 1929.

CONSTRUCTION OF CERTAIN BRIDGES

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to withdraw my objection to the consideration of the bill presented by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DENISON], a bridge bill. I find it is a matter of importance.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I think when a gentleman makes an objection he ought to stand by it until others at least can receive the information that he has. I object to the gentleman withdrawing his objection.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Illinois desire to renew his request?

Mr. DENISON. Yes. Now that the gentleman from Missouri has withdrawn his objection, I renew my unanimous-consent request to take from the Speaker's table Senate bill 1453. I will say in explanation that this bill does not ask consent to build additional bridges. It only extends the time for beginning construction of bridges already authorized. In most cases the plans have been presented and possibly some of them been approved.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DENISON. Yes.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I wish to ask the gentleman whether there are any private toll bridges included in this bill?

Mr. DENISON. There are.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I have about come to the conclusion to object to all private toll bridge bills coming before this Congress under unanimous consent.

Mr. DENISON. I will say to the gentleman that in all these cases both branches of the last Congress passed bills, and franchises have already been granted, and the plans have been presented to the War Department. I think it is not like the case of new bridge bills.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Can the gentleman inform the House whether any of these bridges are to be constructed under franchises granted to that notorious toll-bridge speculator, Mr. Elliott, or any corporation organized by him as a camouflage?

Mr. DENISON. I think I can assure the gentleman there is not one of them so involved.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The gentleman does not believe that any toll-bridge speculators are involved in these companies?

Mr. DENISON. I think I can assure the gentleman that is the case.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. In view of the fact these are extensions and not new projects, I shall not object.

Mr. GARNER. Reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. DENISON. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. GARNER. As I understand, the bill you now ask unanimous consent to consider is a bill extending the time for beginning construction as stated in bills that have already passed the Congress?

Mr. DENISON. That is true.

Mr. GARNER. In addition to that, there are certain amendments you hope to consider for certain bridges in the State of Tennessee?

Mr. DENISON. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. And these matters have had the approval of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DENISON], the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. BURNETT], and the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. PARKS]?

Mr. DENISON. I have consulted with each of those gentlemen in regard to the matter, and they say it is satisfactory to them.

Mr. GARNER. They understand the propositions to be offered and they approve them?

Mr. DENISON. That is true.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Assuming that to be true, what of it?

Mr. GARNER. "What of it" is this: I can not look over these bills. The gentleman from New York [Mr. LA GUARDIA] is more industrious and, I presume, a little bit younger and has a disposition to know what is going on more in detail than the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Not at all.

Mr. GARNER. I do not know about this legislation. There is a subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the Seventieth Congress composed of these three gentlemen, and when they have passed on a subject it is prima facie evidence to me it ought to have the consideration of the House, and that is the reason I do not object.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. I can understand the gentleman's reasoning; but permit me to say to the gentleman from Texas, with all due respect and deference to the subcommittee, they have not kept abreast of the times. [Laughter.]

Mr. GARNER. That may be true. I will let the gentlemen defend themselves about not keeping abreast of the times.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman from Illinois yield for a brief question?

Mr. DENISON. Yes.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Do I understand amendments are going to be considered to this bill with the approval of the gentleman and his subcommittee after the unanimous-consent stage has passed?

Mr. DENISON. I ask unanimous consent to consider the Senate bill. The Senate bill contains only extensions of time in Senate bills. There are two or three Members of the House who have similar requests for extensions of time, and they have asked for the privilege of offering amendments. Of course, the House could vote down any amendment offered.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman and his subcommittee oppose all amendments that may be offered to the bill after it passes the unanimous-consent stage, which would include an authorization for new private toll bridges?

Mr. DENISON. Any amendments for new private toll bridges I will oppose.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. With that assurance, I shall not object.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Will the gentleman from Illinois yield?

Mr. DENISON. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I understand this legislation is made necessary due to the provisions of the general bridge act?

Mr. DENISON. That is right.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. How long has it been since the general bridge act was amended?

Mr. DENISON. It was passed in 1906. It has never been amended.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. There are a few Members here who are very anxious to get some amendment to the general bridge act, but we can not get the committee to bring in any such amendment.

Mr. DENISON. I may say to the gentleman that I have been spending a good deal of my time this session working on a bill amending the general bridge act, and I propose to have it in the Congress at the very beginning of the next session, and I will be very pleased to have the gentleman from Missouri give the bill consideration and help me get it through the House.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. With that assurance, I shall not object.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I trust the gentleman and the other leaders of the House will assist us in bringing in some other legislation which is very emergent for the States of the Southeast. The President of the Board of Managers of the Homes for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers insist that they need an additional home for disabled volunteer soldiers. The Southeast is the place in which they desire to locate this home. This is an emergency matter, and I am simply mentioning this for the consideration of the gentleman.

Mr. DENISON. I will be pleased to help the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. STAFFORD. The bill referred to by the gentleman from Florida should not be considered at the present session without consideration by a committee of the House.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, now that the gentleman from Wisconsin and the gentleman from Missouri and others have withdrawn their objection, permit me to point out that the most vicious thing about all these bridge propositions is the extension of time, because there you have the proof absolute that they have peddled these franchises around, have been unable to negotiate for them, and are asking for more time.

I am going to be consistent. There are nine propositions in this omnibus bill, and three of them are the very kind that some of us have been objecting to. If the gentleman wants to pass the six public bridges where permission is given to States or subdivisions thereof, I shall not object; and in order not to prolong the agony, Mr. Speaker, I object for the present.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS—FARM RELIEF

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, the problem which to-day challenges the attention of this honorable body is as old as the industry itself, involving as it does 6,500,000 farmers representing a population of 30,000,000 of our citizens—an industry that is basic in its nature and means everything to the prosperity of our country. The President of the United States has given serious thought to the question as evidenced by the character of legislation he is urging. His attitude to-day is in keeping with the support by this legislative body offered to the other industries of this republic. They have been encouraged from the orderly beginning of our governmental progress. Farming is no exception to the rule.

We hear advocated by some a subsidy for the farming industry. It might be all well and good, Mr. Speaker, to vote the farmer a subsidy if the Congress of the United States were assured that the farmer needed this subsidy, and that he would get it after it was voted for him. President Hoover, for whom more votes were cast than for any other candidate for this great office, recognizes the need for a solution of the farmer's troubles, and for that purpose he called Congress in special session, not, in my judgment, with the hopes of effecting a complete solution, but to devise ways and means by which some immediate relief can be afforded.

We are in a measure steering our ship of state into uncharted waters, but happily we have the light of history, made so by the great economical giants of the past, and standing as we are to-day upon the shoulders of these giants we should be careful that we do not steer this ship of state too far out of its course. President Hoover recognized the existence of a national disorder. He expressed himself in this regard before his election. There is no expression that he has made since his election that is not in keeping with his every act and every word previous to his election. His message to the Congress impresses one that he wishes to approach the solution of this problem in a sane, rational way as others of like nature have been solved with soundness and discretion. It is not his purpose to treat symptoms, I am impressed; it is the cause he wishes to remove. It should be our high purpose and duty to provide him with the power which he asks for. When we shall have done this we will have discharged our duty as lawmakers. The responsibility is primarily with him. It should rest there, but it can not, unless we give to him a vote of confidence by passing the measure which he stands behind, as was given him by the American people in the election of November, 1928. When we give him this vote of confidence by passing the measure which he advocates we divest ourselves of any criticism that would properly be ours. Some of us are here no doubt because of that expression of confidence in him by the American electorate. The responsibility is lodged with us should we fail to respond to his mandate.

I feel it my duty, with my vote as a Congressman, to give the President what he asks in the way of legislation, and in no other way can the responsibility of the solution of this problem be placed with him. Should we adopt some other course which is not to his liking and not in keeping with his theory of governmental assistance in farm relief, we immediately become obstructionists in his administration by disregarding his ideals as he sees them and as he wishes to deal with them.

President Hoover was elected by the citizens of this Nation regardless almost of political affiliation. His great ability has been tried in the white-hot crucible of experience. Almost in every quarter of the earth and in every kind of emergency, under the most bewildering and trying conditions, he has proven himself the master even almost to the point of a miracle worker.

The debenture idea is a subsidy, and if there is any industry under God's canopy that impresses me as justifying a subsidy, it will be the farming industry of this country, but until the farming organizations are completed, until a farm board has been authorized, until money has been appropriated for the purpose of organizing cooperatives for the farmer's protection, and money advanced for his financial relief, no law, in my judgment, should be enacted until the farm organization has been developed to the point where we are assured that the producers of farm products will realize whatever subsidy is voted. I, therefore, Mr. Speaker, find myself, not only because I am here as a member of the party with which the President is affiliated but because of a just sense of duty which I owe to the protection of the farming industry, first voting for the law in keeping with Mr. Hoover's ideas which will carry out the first step of the farm organization, and then in succeeding Congresses, if it becomes necessary because of recorded experiences laid before this body by the agricultural board created under the farm-relief measure, we can add to this law, whether it be additional appropriations, a subsidy, or what not, I will be found if here casting my vote which will place the farming industry of this country upon a parity with other industries in keeping with the platform pledges of my party which elected Mr. Hoover President of the United States.

Mr. HALL of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, when this Congress convened on the 15th of April I, as a new Member, had high hopes that much would be done for the farming interests of this Nation. I regret that I have less hope now than then. I have observed the course of this legislation, and when the debenture feature of the farm bill was so overwhelmingly rejected by the vote registered I feel the object of our assembling, so far as the farmer is concerned, has been practically defeated. It seems to me the friends of agriculture are much in the minority, yet many voting to eliminate this feature of the bill profess to be friendly to agriculture. I have no right to impugn motives otherwise and can only marvel at their conception of relief. If they believe any substantial relief can be given the farmer unless he has the benefit of the debenture feature or a similar feature, and that a revision of the tariff upward will benefit agriculture, then I confess I am mentally incapable of conceiving such reasoning and fail to see how such could benefit the agricultural interests.

We assembled here in extra session by due proclamation of the President of the United States, discharging, as I understand, one of his pre-election obligations to the American people in promising that Congress would be so assembled for two main purposes. First, for the relief of the farming and the agricultural interests of the Nation; second, for limited revision of the present tariff law.

Certainly, if the President of the United States were not sincere in his declaration as to his wish to improve the agricultural condition of this country, and if he were not sincere in his opinion that it required a fair revision of the tariff arrangement before all would be well with the American people, any further efforts of this Congress will be in vain. My opinion is, had the President divorced farm relief from tariff and submitted only farm relief, much greater progress would have been made. I have witnessed two opposing interests undertaking to enact laws directly opposed to each other, and the result is only what might have been expected under such conditions. That interest supported by a majority of the Republican Party must of necessity be blessed and that by a minority must go unaided.

The tariff is sponsored by the industrial interests of the Nation and well has it been represented here. The heart and brains of the Republican Party have been with this expressed intention of this session. It is manifest to me the leaders of this party have given but little consideration to the agricultural interests. They have presented to this House the bill under consideration and demanded its passage. Their demands have been minutely executed. This, of course, is a wink at agriculture—a bashful flirtation.

The President was confronted early with the necessity of lending his great influence to either the farmer or the friend of industry. There was no escape for him. Had he been equally inclined my judgment is neither the industrial interest nor the agricultural interest would have been benefited at the expense of the other. The result would have been, as we Mississippi country boys used to say, "a dog fall." He declared early he would let this branch of the Government do the legislating, he would be the Executive. This was pretty, and I think was a correct position for him to occupy; but when the friends of agriculture seemed to have some chance to win by inserting in the bill the debenture feature, he was quick to express in strong and vigorous words his disapproval. It requires no special intelligence to know that after his suggestion as to this piece of legislation the friends of the farmer had no fair chance at this session. Was the President consistent? Has he legislated? Did he remain "hitched" to the duties of the Executive? I have an idea 30,000,000 Americans engaged in agriculture will answer, "He certainly has not."

Whether President Hoover has intentionally or unintentionally played into the hands of the industrial group at the expense of the farming interest, his course and expressions have irresistibly had such effects.

It is encouraging, however, to know that the progressive element of his party has joined with the majority of the Democrats and wisely sponsored the debenture feature for relief to the agricultural interest of the Nation. I voted for the farm relief measure written and sponsored by the leaders of the Republican Party in this House.

I realize, as do all Democrats, that under the rules of the House, dominated by the Republican leaders, it is impossible to secure the legislation actually placing agriculture on a parity with other interests. We were precluded under the rules from presenting for consideration the debenture feature without which, or a provision similar thereto, it is economically impossible to give agricultural interest the relief it should have. Yet, the bill passed by the House is the beginning of legislation which will ultimately evolve into enactments fair to this interest.

I thought, and still think, it is impossible under the wisest provisions of farm legislation to take care of the agricultural interest of the Nation wholly apart and disconnected from the application of the tariff law as passed by this House. When I heard so many Members of this House whose record in the past, I understand, have been outspoken and forcible against any proposed legislation in favor of the farming interest, and as many other Members who in the past have maintained that the revolving fund or the debenture feature was the only salvation of the agricultural interest meet on common ground and eloquently sponsor the bill on this floor, I was encouraged. Being a "tenderfoot," I did not know what it was all about.

When the Ways and Means Committee, or the Republican members thereof, brought forth this tariff bill my hopes vanished and my faith was weak. I wonder what the real honest-to-God thoughts of President Hoover were when he realized the attitude of the leaders of this party at this important epoch in an effort to secure the realization of his constructive promulgations. I wonder if he is wise enough to enjoy any real hope or to feel any encouraging breeze through the inconsistencies of the tariff proposals and agricultural relief.

A careful perusal and consideration of the tariff bill discloses that in a few instances agriculture and kindred products have small consideration at the hands of the Ways and Means Committee, and a like consideration of those affecting the industrial and already protected interests of the Nation will disclose clearly that where it is proposed to place one dollar in the pockets of agriculture and labor the industrial interest is permitted to extract seven or eight dollars from that same pocket.

I mention a few glaring proposals of the tariff bill, and it will not require a student of economic conditions or any expert of any interests to appreciate the inequalities of the bill, but "he who runs may read" and understand the craftiness of the leaders and manipulators.

Look at the sugar rate, whereby it is proposed to levy a heavy tax on this commodity. This is proposed under the guise of protecting an American industry. The facts are, only 17 per cent of the sugar consumed by the American people is produced at home, yet in order to enable the gigantic Sugar Trust of America to make its millions tribute is levied on the American consumer. Eighty-three per cent of the sugar consumed is imported, so this is the sugar schedule.

Look at the proposed tariff on finished cotton products. The major portion of the cotton crop of this Nation is exported to mills of foreign countries, and yet under the pretext of protecting American industry and American labor great tribute is sought to be levied on the American consumer by taxing the finished products of this commodity. The most stupid of us know this will tend to lower the price of cotton, and there are more cotton fabric than any other worn by the American people, and this is the relief to the cotton farmer.

Consider the tariff proposed on cement, and at the same time consider the great American need at the present for this necessary product. Much prating is made by the leaders of the present administration and by the champions of the proposed bill of the need of internal improvement. In every hamlet, district, county, and State of the American Union better roads are demanded; great building projects are proposed and desired and much under construction; and yet under the pretense of stimulating an American enterprise and to flirt with labor this form of taxation is proposed. So this is a part of the scheme to relieve the American consumer.

A careful perusal of the entire tariff bill from A to Z discloses very few deductions have been made in the tariff on industrial products, but many advances made. It may be that the fathers of this bill will be able to fool themselves, may have been wise and cunning enough to fool the Chief Executive himself, but certainly the masses and the millions of farmers and their families of this Nation are not fooled, nor will they be cajoled into forgetting the recent promises of the President and the high hopes entertained that this Congress would give the relief they know they are entitled to. This relief a large majority of the American people had a right to expect.

There are many glaring, unjust features of the proposed tariff bill. I shall not take time to call attention to many.

The whole structure bristles with advantages to the already protected interests and with injustice to the masses. One of the most ridiculous arguments made on the floor of this House by the proponents of this measure is, "If you place a tariff on sugar and other commodities, you will not enhance the sale price to the American public." If manufacturers and the favored few are benefited by the tariff, how on earth can they receive such benefits if the American consumer is not penalized? If there could be such, I would denominate this reasoning "mental legerdemain." It occurs to me that to accept the logic of such proponents would be to "knock the brains out of common sense and cut the throat of reason."

I represent a constituency comprised in about equal proportion of farming and industry. Therefore I could not consistently oppose a fair revision of the tariff law advantageous to business; neither could I consistently desire an undue advantage thereby in favor of the agricultural interest. I am happy to occupy such a position, for thereby I must cast my vote in the interest of American industry and in the interest of agriculture and labor at the same time. I feel if this Congress were composed of more Representatives in like position the disastrous condition could easily be adjusted. But when I witness the leaders and makers of this tariff law are inspired solely in the interest of the manufacturers and industry, without the slightest interest in the farmer and laborer, the small business and consumers, I have but scant hope that this session of the Congress will bless the American people to any great extent.

May we indulge in the hope that the President, somewhere and somehow in his own good manner, is demanding the leaders of his party to dismount from their high-handedness in perfecting the tariff bill and in some degree cause them to respect his promises, and at least may we hope they will assume some interest in the general American welfare?

Let us, though of small faith, take renewed hope in a partial surrender of the Ways and Means Committee upon hearing the plaudits of the American people on the position of the advocates of debenture and in the hope the present attitude of the leaders of this branch of the legislation be tempered and a desire to assist the agricultural interest be restored here when we again consider the tariff bill.

Pass your tariff measure as originally written; refuse to be fair, equitable, and just to the farmer and the agricultural interest; undertake to hoodwink American labor; repudiate the mandate of the American voter, reflected in the recent national election, by your creed of "might makes right"; with your tremendous majority here, continue upon your knees to pay homage to the special interests; and if you do, you but delay the blessed day when every American shall by the law of this land share an equal opportunity. There will then come that day when the indomitable American spirit will incite its manhood to arise from the ashes of your despoiled opportunity and demand its just consideration. Then when the ballots of the American people have been registered, on that day you will surely be relegated to the limbo of the past and be numbered among those who have been faithless to a solemn, majestic trust.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I represent a district in Ohio very fertile and the finest agricultural district in the State. It is the Corn Belt where corn is king and hogs a safe bet. It is also the home of the sugar beet, where the smoke of sugar refineries rises. It is also well blessed with diversification; that is to say, it has splendid crops of wheat, corn, and oats, and is the home of a numerous cow population, where beef and dairy cattle abound, and thoroughbred flocks of poultry are to be seen on every hand.

The farmers are my constituents, and are the important and predominant class, especially the German farmers. These thrifty people, as a rule, are not clamoring for farm relief. But there has been such extensive propaganda for years, promulgated by the wheat farmers of other sections of the country, and the professional farm agitators located in Washington and retained here by various farmer organizations at considerable expense, until the farmers of every section of the country regardless of conditions really think there is a necessity for "farm relief."

The Congress has for some time past regarded it as a necessary question to deal with. Within the last few days it seems to have become a political issue rather than an economic question, which it really is. My district belongs to neither Michigan nor Indiana, for the reason that it is composed of the seven northwest counties of Ohio. When I came to Congress I was placed upon the Agricultural Committee because of my location and the pronounced agricultural characteristics of the district, and not because I was a farmer, but because I was raised in that rural section and had published a newspaper there for a great many years and was thought to be farmer-minded.

For the past seven years I have been sitting as a member of the Agricultural Committee of the House, composed mostly of attorneys, listening to what the farmers really wanted for farm relief. I soon discovered that in reality the entire farm relief question, so called, was an economic proposition and that politics should not enter into it. At least the committee never practiced politics in consideration of its question, but seemed to be entirely nonpartisan. The committee, I think, realized that such was the condition and were unable to definitely determine just what the various farm organizations would agree upon. The nearest approach we ever came to solving the problem was when we reported out of the committee the McNary-Haugen bills; but these measures did not meet with the approval of the gamblers, the stockmen, much less the great army of consumers. The influence set to work to defeat these bills was so tremendous and powerful that while passed by Congress they were twice vetoed.

I followed the committee on all these occasions. I conscientiously tried to get farm relief legislation. Never at any time did I vote against the farmer, although realizing that none of the measures were perfect.

Now we have arrived at another crisis in this whole question. We must determine whether we want farm relief, or whether we shall split hairs over the question and never act. What this Congress needs is action and not an indeterminate haggling over comparative nonessentials. I for one am for action with a swift and heavy hand, and am prepared to act now by disagreeing to this conference report and by instructing that august body at the other end of this Capitol to remove from this farm-relief question their self-appointed political interference known as the debenture plan.

I said during the campaign that I was willing to trust the President. It was not idle talk then; I meant it, and I mean it now. The President is an Iowa man, born and bred, and is farmer minded. Coupled with it he is also commercial minded, and the two qualifications together should eminently fit him to work out this House plan as now enacted and as will best benefit the whole country. The House plan sets up the machinery of a board of eight members with great powers. This board is to look after the surpluses and the stabilization of prices on farm products through the agencies of cooperative and accurate marketing. He appoints the members of this board, and these gentlemen are to be responsible to him and to him alone. It seems to me that just now the merits or demerits of the debenture plan are not at issue and not to be considered. The question is: Shall we have or not have farm relief, and have it now?

I, therefore, assume the full measure of responsibility as a representative of my people and decide for them, as a true representative should decide, for the draft of this conference report bill with debenture left out.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, under permission to extend my remarks with respect to the debenture plan, undoubtedly the proposed debenture plan would in a degree benefit the farmers if applied and properly administered, but section 10 (a) provides:

EXPORT DEBENTURES

SEC. 10. (a) Whenever the board finds it advisable, in order to carry out the policy declared in section 1 with respect to any agricultural commodity, to issue export debentures with respect to such commodity, the board shall give notice of such finding to the Secretary of the Treasury. Upon the receipt of such notice it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, commencing and terminating at such time as the board shall prescribe, to issue export debentures to any farmer, cooperative association, stabilization corporation, or other person with respect to such quantity of the commodity or any manufactured food product thereof or any product manufactured from cotton or tobacco, if the cotton or tobacco out of which it is manufactured if exported in the raw material would have been entitled to receive a debenture therefor, as such person may from time to time export from the United States to any foreign country. The export debenture shall be in an amount to be computed under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, in accordance with such regulations as he may prescribe, at the debenture rate for the commodity or product that is in effect at the time of exportation. Any such computation shall be final.

Note, the debenture may be issued by the Secretary of the Treasury only whenever the board finds it advisable to carry out the policy declared in section 1. A fair question is, in the event a board is established as provided in the bill, to be appointed by the President—a board responsive to the President—of course no one would accept of a position unless willing to carry out the policy of the President. The President at numerous times has made his position clear in respect to the debenture plan. In his letter of April 20, 1929, to the chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, he gave 10 explicit reasons against the adoption of the debenture plan. At numerous times he has made it clear that he is not in sympathy with the debenture plan. Is it not fair to assume that the board appointed by the President and not in sympathy with the plan—a board responsive to the President—it would never find it advisable to give the required notice to the Secretary of the Treasury to issue the export debentures? If so, the only authority granted for the issuance of debentures would never be exercised; consequently no relief whatever could be afforded under the proposed debenture plan.

In all candor, if the debenture is practicable, workable, and beneficial, by all means it should be mandatory upon the Secretary of the Treasury to issue debentures. If its aim is to make it of benefit to the producers there should be no ifs or ands about it. We should come out in the open and make it real, and not imaginary.

Further on, it provides, "Export debenture shall be issued not only to the farmers, cooperative associations, stabilization corporations, or other persons with respect to the quantity of the commodity," but, mind you, to "any manufactured food product thereof," or any product manufactured from cotton or tobacco if the cotton or tobacco out of which it is manufactured, if exported in the raw material, would have been entitled to receive a debenture therefor," and "such person may from time to time export from the United States to any foreign country * * * in an amount to be computed under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury."

Evidently not a debenture altogether for the benefit of the producer, but more particularly for the manufacturer to reap the benefits therefrom.

Under it exporters of manufactured products would be entitled to the debenture. If also an importer, they might apply the debenture in payment on imports. For example, spinners of cotton, exporting in 1927, $959,616,000 of manufactures of cotton, now already protected by the tariff of from 30 to 40 per cent ad valorem, would receive in addition thereto 2 cents per pound, equivalent to more than 10 per cent. Manufacturers of cigars in addition to the debentures would receive from 53 cents to $2.75 per pound tariff protection, and manufacturers of cigarettes in addition to the $4.50 per pound and 25 per cent ad valorem would also receive the debentures.

Take, for instance, an importer, also in the exporting business of such products, or who might arrange with the manufacturer to export in his name manufactured products of commodities, might draw debentures on the products exported and use them in payment of duty upon imports, and might in many instances absorb all the benefits without affecting the price paid to the producers.

Subsection (d) provides that the debenture rate shall be one-half of the rate of duty in effect and the rate on cotton, 2 cents a pound. There is no tariff on cotton of the type exported and no tariff is suggested. At the current rate of duty on exportable portions of the commodities debentures would be as follows:

Commodity	Exports	Tariff	Deben- ture rate	Total
Wheat (1928).....	191,048,000	$0.42	$0.21	$40,120,080
Corn (1927).....	19,410,000	.15	.075	1,455,750
Beef (1928).....	24,000,000	.03	.015	360,000
Lard (1928).....	783,000,000	.01	.005	3,915,000
Butter (1927).....	5,048,000	.12	.06	302,880

The exports of cotton varies from year to year, and has ranged in value from 1910 to 1927, from $551,900,000 up to $1,137,000,000. The number of bales exported has ranged from 2,742,968 in 1923 to 4,897,063 in 1927, and at the rate of $10 per bale of 500 net pounds would be from $27,429,680 up to $48,970,630—in other words, a subsidy from twenty-seven to forty-eight millions to the producers and manufacturers in addition to the debentures on manufactured goods aggregating many millions of dollars.

If the party platform pledges of the two parties "to place the farmer on a equality with other" is to be fulfilled, why only one-half—redeeming party platforms to the extent of one-half of the tariff protection they are entitled to—why not redeem in full? Fifty per cent of an obligation is in no way a fulfillment of a contract. Men of honor hold that every obligation, great or small, shall be redeemed unconditionally. Why compromise? If so, it takes two to make a bargain. In this case the compromise is determined by Congress, and the producers are left out of the agreement.

Admitting that the debenture plan has merit, and that it would advance the price of commodities to the extent of the debenture, and which, of course, in the aggregate would afford substantial benefit but with the uncertainty of its application, why merely a gesture—why not a mandate?

Section 10 (a) provides that—

In order to prevent undue stimulation in the production of any debenturable agricultural commodity, whenever the board finds prior to the beginning of a crop year that the probable production of any debenturable commodity during such crop year will exceed the average annual production of such debenturable agricultural commodity for the preceding five years, it shall by proclamation prescribe that the export debenture rates for such commodity shall be reduced by the percentages hereinafter fixed.

This is a further compromise, and falls far short of fulfillment of our obligations under party platform pledges.

If the aim of the measure is to make the tariff effective to the farmers, as clearly set out in section No. 1, and as the board is directed to do in the declaration of policy "to aid in preventing and controlling surpluses in any agricultural commodity through orderly production and distribution, so as to maintain advantageous domestic markets and prevent such surpluses from causing undue and excessive fluctuations or depressing the price for the commodity" and also providing "that the Federal farm board shall execute the powers vested in it by this act to aid to the fullest extent in carrying out the policy declared" rather than to enact into law a provision so indefinite and vague in its terms, it should be made mandatory—more definite. Even with that, why compromise and pay only from 1 to 50 per cent of the tariff that the farmers are entitled to, at the expense of the Federal Treasury?

If any doubt as to the board and the farmer taking advantage of the benefits afforded, why not specifically provide that the tariff shall be made effective on agricultural commodities as provided in the McNARY-HAUGEN bill, by compulsory pooling of the whole production, through the medium of the equalization-fee plan, to stabilize and equalize the price, requiring each producer to pay his ratable share of the cost of marketing and equalizing, and to receive his proportionate share of the profits therefrom, so that each producer may share alike in the costs and profits therefrom, instead of voluntary pooling and the approval of plans by the board, as may be done under the proposed bill—notwithstanding the contention of some "that it does not manifest the slightest effort to make the tariff effective in behalf of our surplus farm commodities, nor redeem platform pledges to insure equality for agriculture"—in other words, to make the tariff effective through compulsory pooling, and not discretionary with the producers and the board, as provided in the bill.

But the equalization-fee plan did not receive approval at the conventions of either of the two major parties nor by the respective candidates of the two parties. In view of the urgent demand for farm-relief legislation and the doubt of its passage and liability of veto, it seemed clear to the legislative representatives of farm groups and friends of real farm relief legislation that with the assurance given, that the voluntary pooling as may be accomplished under the bill would give the desired results, it seemed futile to incorporate in the bill the equalization-fee plan, the compulsory pooling provision; hence the equalization-fee plan was temporarily abandoned, and if the producers will take the advantage of it and the board will carry out the policy declared and directed and make it effective, as is intended and can be made, it will accomplish as much as any bill heretofore considered; if not, all friends will renew their efforts and the equalization-fee plan or any other specific or effective plan can be put into operation.

Had the proposed debenture plan had been in operation last year and the price of corn had advanced 7½ cents a bushel, on the whole crop produced of 2,839,959,000 bushels the total gain would have been $212,996,925, of which $1,455,750 would have been in debentures on the 19,410,000 bushels exported and at the expense of the Federal Treasury.

Under the equalization plan the producers would have received instead of the $0.997 per bushel, Chicago price, the Buenos Aires price of $0.93, plus export tax of $0.02, ocean freight $0.0875, or a total of $1.18¾, minus an equalization fee of 1.2 mills ($0.0012), a net gain of $0.1803 per bushel on the entire production, or a grand total of $539,604,238.

Under the debenture plan on wheat for last year, if the price of the whole crop of 903,865,000 bushels had advanced 21 cents, or a total of $189,811,650, of which $4,012,008 would have been in debentures on the net exports of 191,048,000 bushels exported and at the expense of the Federal Treasury.

Under the equalization plan the producers of wheat would have received instead of the Minneapolis price of $1.41 the Winnipeg price of $1.49, plus the tariff of 42 cents, freight $0.03, minus the equalization fee of $0.112, a net increase of $0.418 and a net profit of $377,815,570.

For the two commodities the producers would have received under the debenture plan, assuming that the 50 per cent of the tariff had been applied to the whole production, a total of $402,808,575, of which $5,467,758 would have been at the expense of the Federal Treasury. Under the equalization plan the total would have been $917,419,808 without expense to the Federal Treasury. Not only would the producers be ahead $514,611,233, but the Federal Treasury would have been ahead $5,467,758.

If the debenture plan is desired and believed beneficial to the producers, which undoubtedly it would be if applied and properly administered, it might be that nations to whom debenturable commodities were imported might apply a countervailing duty. If so, it would be of no benefit to the producer or exporter, but, on the contrary, at a loss to the extent of any discount he might have to take on the debenture, and at the expense of the Federal Treasury, the amount of the debenture ultimately going into the treasury of the importing nation. For example, the export debenture on 100,000 bushels of corn would be $7,500 paid to the exporter, not paid directly out of the Federal Treasury but diverted before reaching the Treasury; in other words, used in payment of duties on imports. In case a countervailing duty were applied by the importing nation, the exporter would be required to pay $7,500 countervailing duty, to be paid into the treasury of the nation to which the corn was exported. As a result Uncle Sam would be out $7,500 in debentures and the exporters would be out whatever the discount on the debenture might be, and the foreign nation would be $7,500 ahead and the foreign consumer would pay the bill.

Outside of the merits or demerits of the export debenture plan there are other questions involved. There is the question of constitutionality because of its origin. Under the rules of the House the House Committee on Agriculture had no jurisdiction over the debenture plan. Jurisdiction over it lies with the Committee on Ways and Means. Section 7 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States provides as follows:

All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other bills.

The debenture plan did not originate in the House. It originated in the Senate, which by many is held to be unconstitutional. In order to speedily pass legislation affording relief to agriculture, and in order to avoid controversy between the two Houses in respect to the question of constitutionality, the House, on May 17, passed House Resolution 45, by a vote of 249 for and 119 against, as follows:

Whereas in the opinion of the House, there is a question as to whether or not section 10 of the amendment of the Senate to H. R. 1 contravenes the first clause of section 7 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States, and is an infringement on the rights and privileges of this House, but in view of the present legislative situation and the desire of this House to speedily pass legislation affording relief to agriculture, and with the distinct understanding that the action of the House in this instance shall not be deemed to be a precedent, so far as the constitutional prerogatives of the House are concerned: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 1, with a Senate amendment, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to conference asked by the Senate, and that the Speaker shall immediately appoint conferees—and sent the bill to conference.

If, as many contend, it contravenes the first clause of section 7 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States, and is an infringement on the rights and privileges of the House, why take chances of court expenses and the delay in awaiting a decision with respect to its constitutionality; why not incorporate it in the tariff bill now before the Senate, where it may be incorporated, eliminating the question of constitutionality, also eliminating the delay and expense?

Mr. FREE. Mr. Speaker, the attitude of the California fruit interests in regard to the farm bill is well expressed in a telegram of which I am in receipt. The telegram is as follows:

FRESNO, CALIF., June 11, 1929.

Hon. A. M. FREE,
Washington, D. C.:

The news of the decision of Senate on farm relief bill reached Fresno this afternoon and delivered to large growers' meeting. Federal assistance to our plans was being stressed, and growers were being assured of cooperation of Government. All growers in deciduous tree fruit and grape areas of California are astounded at Senate vote. We appeal to you to make sure farm relief bill passed immediately by Congress. Deciduous tree fruit and California grape growers have not received cost production, irrespective of living and interest, during past three years. They are seeking maintain invested capital in excess $700,000,000 in valuation orchards and vineyards alone.

One million four hundred thousand acres California orchards and vineyards annually produce in excess 3,500,000 tons essential fruit and constitute world's chief source of supply of these particular classes and varieties. Livelihood of 40,000 deciduous tree fruit and grape growers of California and their wives and children depend upon well-being of this industry. By reason of unfavorable economic and marketing conditions, together with unfortunate disintegration in distribution processes of industry, tree fruit and grape growers now face condition of acute financial distress. There is no parallel in American agriculture to depressed conditions confronting people of California throughout all rural districts except oranges and lemons. Unless prompt relief measures are applied entire State of California, including its industries and all others who profit from purchasing power of our vast acreage, will suffer staggering loss by reason utter failure of deciduous tree fruit and grape crop in 1929. Our growers have lost banking credit, and their human and social relations require immediate but temporary Government assistance. There is nothing unsound concerning statistical position of tree fruit and grape industry, but to again permit inroads of speculative interests and securing control and marketing of our crops represented inexcusable commentary upon the Congress of the country. Farm relief bill provides temporary aid necessary for these more important industries of this State. We ask that you work and vote for speedy enactment this measure. It is a truism that salvation of homes, happiness, and children of families of growers are dependent upon this legislation. We ask that you consider these most vital attributes in human relations in behalf of our people and make these circumstances paramount above all other conditions in your attitude toward farm-relief legislation. Thousands of our producers are Burton A. Towne, president California Vineyardists Association; W. H. Williamson, president Associated California Fruit Industries; Henry Dermer, chairman growers committee, Fresno County; Herbert R. Freeland, chairman business men's committee, Fresno County; Lodi Chamber of Commerce; E. Powers Manteca, chamber of commerce; Dr. T. H. Stice, Napa Chamber of Commerce; Charles Latimer, Ontario Chamber of Commerce; George F. Johnston, Imperial Valley Growers; E. L. Cunningham, chairman Deciduous Association, Mendocino County; George L. Bare, chairman Deciduous Association, Stanislaus County; Ed Lewis, chairman Deciduous Association, Sacramento County; Albert Haentze, chairman Deciduous Association, Santa Clara County; Milo L. Rowell, Fresno; Lucius Powers, president Central California Growers Association, Fresno; Z. S. Leymel, mayor city of Fresno; Visalia Chamber of Commerce; Bakersfield Chamber of Commerce; Delano Chamber of Commerce; Madera Chamber of Commerce; Livermore, Brentwood District Associated California Fruit Industries; Merced Chamber of Commerce; Modesto Chamber of Commerce; Kings County Chamber of Commerce; Col. R. E. Tayman, Healdsburg Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, the tariff is essentially a charge on the people with results that are in many cases disputed by economists at home and abroad. The debenture proposed as an amendment to the farm relief bill now in conference would be, if adopted as a part of the measure that will become the law shortly, in all probability, a charge upon the Treasury which is in itself a charge upon the people. So that both the tariff and the debenture are fundamentally the same in origin, purpose, and effect from the standpoint of the principle involved though the results in the two instances might be questioned by the proponents of each of the two propositions and certainly by the opponents of both of them as uneconomic, unjust, and inequitable charges whose ill effects could not be compensated for by any demonstrable resulting benefits.

Generally speaking, a fair tariff should produce a prosperity that would otherwise not be ours. What profiteth an American if foodstuffs and clothing be ever so cheap and he hath no employment? Ask those who believe in the protective theory. Which means that it is preferable to stand for high prices and pay them with the wherewith that flows from domestic prosperity than to look into shop windows where goods are exposed at low prices which you are unable to pay as a result of an empty pocket and unemployment. But what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. If a tariff or a charge on the people is beneficial to sugar and rice production, which we are interested in in south Louisiana, why should not a debenture worth $10 a bale be of benefit to cotton production in north Louisiana? And if it be true that cities, even when they are seaports, are dependent for their genesis, existence, growth, and prosperity upon the surrounding contiguous country, why not promote agriculture generally and not only a few of her products? And why not emphasize, enlarge, broaden, and insure our rural prosperity by adopting a plan that would be harmonious in all of its parts?

Such a plan should meet with Democratic indorsement, for it is not at variance with the platform adopted at Houston, and is the antithesis of the old tariff idea which had the opposition of those who believe in equal rights to all and special privileges to none. With the cotton planter of north Louisiana prosperous, and the sugar and rice planter of south Louisiana prosperous, I have no doubt that we in the old city will prosper and reflect the good times felt over the State. And why should anyone hesitate about adopting the debenture plan since it is not a mandatory but an optional provision which the farm board, to be appointed by President Hoover, would use and put into operation only in their wise discretion. Particularly is this query pertinent in view of the fact that under the elastic provisions of the new tariff bill the commission to be appointed by the President may exercise a power and the President enforce the result of it in the way of altering, changing, and even initiating and creating rates, of far greater consequence financially and economically than the issuance of the contemplated debenture.

The elastic provision is so far-reaching in its potentialities and effects as to wring a moan of anguish from the lips of JAMES M. BECK, who trembled with apprehension and viewed with alarm a scheme of executive government so at variance with the underlying principles of freedom and liberty, political and economic, though I think that this high priest of the Republican temple of Pennsylvania but apparently of lesser stature in the National Republican Party as was seen and noted in the recent caucus, may believe that through the machinations of some near free-trade Democratic President the enlarged and broadened elastic provisions may become the instrumentality to destroy the protective system. In other words, that the creature provision may enact the rôle of the monster which was created by Frankenstein.

Apparently his colleagues in caucus assembled thought the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania was "all wet" and so far off the reservation that he was looking at the remote horizon instead of at his feet, which is suggestive of the story that once upon a time in the long, long ago, Thales, the celebrated philosopher, fell into a ditch and when yanked out by the hair of the head by an old woman, told her his plight was due to the fact that he was looking at the stars, which caused the practical dame to remark that if he had been looking at his feet instead of stargazing he would not be "all wet." But the brilliant former Solicitor General has the viewpoint in this tariff provision which he so ably discussed on the floor of the House of many thoughtful Americans, I am sure.

"I care not who writes the laws of a country if you will permit me to write its songs," as Fletcher substantially declared, finds an apt and expressive paraphrase in: "I care not who writes the rates in a tariff bill if you permit me to revise or change them." And as the tariff is closely connected with the revenues of the country which permit of appropriations, let me say that the Republican Party in control of the Government for four years more could in some measure rehabilitate themselves with the people, whose confidence they have lost or forfeited by inability to provide and adapt constructive legislation, for carrying out the far-sighted patriotic and wise suggestions of the great magazine weekly, Liberty, which in an editorial of appealing force some time ago urged the Federal Government to originate a movement and connect it up with a similar movement of the States and their towns and cities to construct and build their roads, bridges, and public works and buildings in slack times, and thereby in a large measure meet and solve their unemployment cycles and problems which have become the curse and terror of humanity, young and old. In the daily bulletin of the Manufacturers Record of June 11, under the caption, "Cut the Red Tape," this wise policy is presented with convincing force by Richard H. Edmonds. Ye who are interested in "the short and simple annals of the poor" and the wisdom of maintaining business so as to prevent unemployment should read this article by one of the foremost champions of southern rights and national integrity.

President Hoover, when Secretary of Commerce, advocated a similar plan to that of Liberty and the Manufacturers Record and the many periodicals and newspapers that saw the governmental wisdom in such a course. In a masterly way he pointed out that this work would stimulate business activity and turn the tide from depression to prosperity. Highway and waterway improvement on a large scale would do much in connection with a vast public building construction plan and movement to relieve the present depression and unemployment situation which is so obvious that its denial by anyone leads to the thought that he is in danger of blowing the gas out. "Start public works" should be the order of President Hoover. They who are out of work—and they are millions—will rise and call him blessed if he will brighten their lives, their homes, their souls, by removing through employment the haggard lines from faces of men and women who are willing to die for their country whenever the requirements of war demand such a sacrifice. I repeat that Mr. Edmonds has hit the nail squarely on the head, and so has Liberty and the host of journalists who have become heroes in the strife for a great construction policy, for, as they have stated, expenditures for highways, waterways, flood control, and public buildings are an investment when viewed in the proper light and will render huge return. Keep in mind that if all of the people now out of employment, eager for work to support their families, could find employment by reason of this proposed building activity and the general effect it would have on the country's trade, the consuming power of the people would be increased to absorb all the supposed surplus food-stuffs now pressing upon the market and breaking down prices. Give us a fair tariff bill which will include debenture and a public works bill and the success of your administration is assured.

Lift from the faces of the toilers who are idle the sorrow and sadness too deep for the well-to-do and prosperous to understand by leading the fight, Mr. President, for the adoption of a policy that will secure you a lasting place in the affections of your countrymen. Give the order, "Forward march to public improvements and prosperity."

But to return to the debenture: If the President should lose sight of the logic of the debenture and should exercise the veto power, then Congress can pass the farm bill with the debenture section eliminated within two days, as pointed out by Senator NORRIS on the floor of the Senate and in a letter by the National Grange, copy of which I received this morning.

The Republican Party may as well make up their minds now as later on that the debenture plan as an actional part or section of a farm relief or tariff bill is a sine qua non. Without it a tariff bill is as unjust, unfair, and oppressive as many conservative opponents of such taxation have termed it. For without it the tariff is not general in purpose or effect and is consequently, to a large extent, special or, to be truthful and candid, favoritism to those who are powerful and influential enough politically to demand and receive their share of the bacon or spoils, whichever you prefer.

Like Banquo's ghost, the debenture plan will not down. It must be made part and parcel of the protective system, or the protective system will go tottering to its destruction and fall as a result of the impossibility of its proponents meeting intellectually the shattering arguments of its opponents, who are even now stripping it of the sophistry with which its friends have hedged it in as the palladium of our industrial fortress and citadel of high walls.

The President practically admits the soundness of the theory of it when he says, "For no matter what the theory of the export subsidy may be, in the practical world we live in it will not bring equality but will bring further disparity to agriculture," which conclusion is, of course, not in consonance with the practically admitted premise.

But let the fight go on. It is on the anvil of discussion that the spark of truth will fly. And from present indications the debenturites are going to smite the high tariffites hip and thigh and expose the weakness of a subsidy structure that supports industry—rich, powerful, swollen industry—almost exclusively.

Mr. LANKFORD of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I regret that the export debenture plan was voted down and now very probably will not be in the so-called farm relief bill when it becomes law. The debenture scheme will not put the farmer on a parity with other industries. It would improve very much, though, the present bill, and I can not understand how Members who favor farm relief can oppose the debenture idea. With great misgivings I am voting for the present bill. I am hoping when its defects become recognized as glaring inconsistencies and dangerous to agriculture there will be left enough friends of the farmer to correct and improve it until it becomes a good piece of legislation.

Congress by the passage of the present bill admits that it can not yet solve the farm problem and, therefore, provides a powerful board with almost unlimited powers and enormous funds, and delegates to the board the prerogative of doing what the Congress has failed to do, to wit, solve the farm problem. Congress says it can not do what it hopes this board can do. The board may solve it, but I have grave fears that it will not. I know it will not solve it until some more legislation is passed. We have just begun the task.

While I have always favored the debenture plan, I have objected to debentures being issued to the exporters. I fear this help is too indirect and that not enough of it will ever reach the farmer. I have hoped all the while that when the export debenture plan finally became law the debentures would be issued to the farmers or to some agency acting in behalf of the farmers, so the benefit would flow directly to the farmer. I have heretofore introduced bills and offered amendments to farm bills, seeking to provide for the benefits of the debenture to flow directly to the farmer, and was gratified on yesterday to hear my idea indorsed by one of the best friends of the farmer in Congress.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. Speaker, under permission to extend my remarks on H. R. 1, the farm bill, I believe it would be well for us to review the various pledges in both the Republican platform and the public utterances of the Republican nominee, so far as farm relief legislation is concerned.

The Republican Party adopted as a part of its platform, after several general declarations with reference to the condition of the farm interests of the country, the following party pledge:

The Republican Party pledges itself to the enactment of legislation creating a Federal farm board clothed with the necessary powers to promote the establishment of a farm marketing system of farmer-owned-and-controlled stabilization corporations or associations to prevent and control surpluses through orderly distribution.

We favor adequate tariff protection to such of our agricultural products as are affected by foreign competition.

We favor, without putting the Government into business, the establishment of a Federal system of organization for cooperative and orderly marketing of farm products.

The vigorous efforts of this administration toward broadening our exports market will be continued.

The Republican Party pledges itself to the development and enactment of measures which will place the agricultural interests of America on a basis of economic equality with other industries to insure its prosperity and success.

In his acceptance speech President Hoover, under date of August 11, 1928, made the following declarations:

The platform proposes to go much farther. It pledges the creation of a Federal farm board of representative farmers to be clothed with authority and resources with which not only to still further aid farmers' cooperatives and pools and to assist generally in solution of farm problems but especially to build up with Federal finance farmer-owned and farmer-controlled stabilization corporations which will protect the farmer from the depressions and demoralization of seasonal gluts and periodical surpluses.

Objection has been made that this program as laid down by the party platform may require that several hundred millions of dollars of capital be advanced by the Federal Government without obligation upon the individual farmer. With that objection I have little patience. A nation which is spending ninety billions a year can well afford an expenditure of a few hundred millions for a workable program that will give to one-third of its population their fair share of the Nation's prosperity. Nor does this proposal put the Government into business except so far as it is called upon to furnish capital with which to build up the farmer to the control of his own destinies.

The program adapts itself to the variable problems of agriculture not only to-day but which will arise in the future. I do not believe that any single human being or any group of human beings can determine in advance all questions that will arise in so vast and complicated an industry over a term of years. The first step is to create an effective agency directly for these purposes and to give it authority and resources. These are solemn pledges and they will be fulfilled by the Republican Party. It is a definite plan of relief. It needs only the detailed elaboration of legislation and appropriations to put it into force.

Following that utterance, former Governor Frank O. Lowden, at his home, as quoted in the New York World, under date of August 14, 1928, made the following suggestions:

I am much impressed by Mr. Hoover's acceptance speech as a whole. With reference to agriculture, his frank recognition that the agricultural problem is the most urgent economic problem in our Nation to-day is very heartening. I have stated, I think a thousand times, that a general acknowledgment that the problem exists would be half the battle. If there had been such recognition years ago the agricultural situation would be vastly different to-day.

Mr. Hoover's aspirations to bring the farm population up to economic equality with other groups have my heartiest approval. I think, however, it will be found practically that his proposed stabilization corporation will only attain the objects which he hopes to accomplish if the cost to the corporation of stabilizing the price of any commodity be distributed over the commodity involved and not taken from the public Treasury.

In order that there might be no misunderstanding concerning the position of President Hoover as the Republican nominee, he again referred to the pledge of the Republican Party and again expressed his views with reference to the farm problem at West Branch, Iowa, at the home-coming celebration there, held under date of August 21, 1928, as follows:

A Federal farm board is to be set up with the necessary powers and resources to assist the industry to meet not alone the varied problems of to-day but those which may arise in the future. My fundamental concept of agriculture is one controlled by its own members, organized to fight its own economic battles and to determine its own destinies. Nor do I speak of organization in the narrow sense of traditional farm cooperatives or pools, but in the much wider sense of a sound marketing organization. It is not by these proposals intended to put the Government into the control of the business of agriculture, nor to subsidize the prices of farm products and pay the losses thereon either by the Federal Treasury or by a tax or fee on the farmer. We propose with governmental assistance and an initial advance of capital to enable the agricultural industry to reach a stature of modern business operations by which the farmer will attain his independence and maintain his individuality.

As a further pledge to the agricultural interests of the country in the closing days of the campaign, President Hoover made this commitment, under date of November 2, 1928, at St. Louis, Mo.:

But to return to the farm question.

In addition to the tariff and cheaper waterway transportation in assistance to agriculture, the Republican Party proposes to go farther. It proposes to set up an institution which will be one of the most important institutions in our Government, designed to meet not only the varied problems which confront us to-day but those which may arise in the future. We propose to create a Federal farm board composed of men of understanding and sympathy for the problems of agriculture; we propose this board should have power to determine the facts, the causes, the remedies which should be applied to each and every one of the multitude of problems which we mass under the general term "the agricultural problem."

This program further provides that the board shall have a broad authority to act and be authorized to assist in the further development of cooperative marketing; that it shall assist in the development of clearing houses for agricultural products, in the development of adequate warehousing facilities, in the elimination of wastes in distribution, and in the solution of other problems as they arise. But in particular the board is to build up, with initial advances of capital from the Government, farmer-owned and farmer-controlled stabilization corporations which will protect the farmer from depressions and the demoralization of summer and periodic surpluses.

It is proposed that this board should have placed at its disposal such resources as are necessary to make its action effective.

Thus we give to the Federal farm board every arm with which to deal with the multitude of problems. This is an entirely different method of approach to solution from that of a general formula; it is flexible and adaptable. No such far-reaching and specific proposal has ever been made by a political party on behalf of any industry in our history. It is a direct business proposition. It marks our desire for establishment of farmers' stability and, at the same time, maintains his independence and individuality.

This plan is consonant with our American ideals to avoid the Government operation of commercial business; for it places the operation upon the farmer himself, not upon a bureaucracy. It puts the Government in its real relation to the citizen—that of cooperation. Its object is to give equality of opportunity to the farmer. I would consider it the greatest honor I could have if it should become my privilege to aid in finally solving this the most difficult of economic problems presented to our people, and the one in which by inheritance and through long contact I have my deepest interest.

President Hoover, after his inauguration, on the date of April 16, 1929, in his message to Congress, again referred to the farm question in the following language:

The Government has a special mandate from the recent election, not only to further develop our waterways and revise the agricultural tariff, but also to extend systematic relief in other directions.

I have long held that the multiplicity of causes of agricultural depression could only be met by the creation of a great instrumentality clothed with sufficient authority and resources to assist our farmers to meet these problems, each upon its own merits. The creation of such an agency would at once transfer the agricultural question from the field of politics into the realm of economics and would result in constructive action. The administration is pledged to create an instrumentality that will investigate the causes, find sound remedies, and have the authority and resources to apply those remedies.

The pledged purpose of such a Federal farm board is the reorganization of the marketing system on sounder and more stable and more economic lines. To do this the board will require funds to assist in creating and sustaining farmer-owned and farmer-controlled agencies for a variety of purposes, such as the acquisition of adequate warehousing and other facilities for marketing; adequate working capital to be advanced against commodities lodged for storage; necessary and prudent advances to corporations created and owned by farmers' marketing organizations for the purchase and orderly marketing of surpluses occasioned by climatic variations or by harvest congestion; to authorize the creation and support of clearing houses, especially for perishable products, through which, under producers' approval, cooperation can be established with distributors and processors to more orderly marketing of commodities, and for the elimination of many wastes in distribution; and to provide for licensing of handlers of some perishable products so as to eliminate unfair practices. Every penny of waste between farmer and consumer that we can eliminate, whether it arises from methods of distribution or from hazard or speculation, will be a gain to both farmer and consumer.

In addition to these special provisions in the direction of improved returns, the board should be organized to investigate every field of economic betterment for the farmer so as to furnish guidance as to need in production, to devise methods for elimination of unprofitable marginal lands and their adaptation to other uses; to develop industrial by-products, and to survey a score of other fields of helpfulness.

Certain safeguards must naturally surround these activities and the instrumentalities that are created. Certain vital principles must be adhered to in order that we may not undermine the freedom of our farmers and of our people as a whole by bureaucratic and governmental domination and interference. We must not undermine initiative. There should be no fee or tax imposed upon the farmer. No governmental agency should engage in the buying and selling and price fixing of products, for such courses can lead only to bureaucracy and domination. Government funds should not be loaned or facilities duplicated where other services of credit and facilities are available at reasonable rates. No activities should be set in motion that will result in increasing the surplus production, as such will defeat any plans of relief.

Again it is my desire to call attention to the approval of former Gov. Frank O. Lowden to the Hoover program in an Associated Press release, under date of April 26, 1929, as follows:

Mr. Hoover, in the campaign last fall, stated clearly and unequivocally his opposition to the principle of the equalization fee, as well as to the principle of the debenture plan. He was elected by a substantial majority. The country, therefore, authorized him to proceed with his own agricultural program. That program was outlined, not only in his speeches but more fully in his recent message to Congress.

It is to be assumed that upon an issue so clearly decided by the election Congress will support the President. It then becomes the duty of all sincere friends of farm relief to cooperate with the administration in giving effect to its program. If it later should appear that this program was inadequate, the President indicated in his message that the way is open for further action.

In order that there may be no misunderstanding of the President's attitude, with particular reference to the farm bill and the debenture amendment, I am inserting President Hoover's statement given under date of June 11, 1929, following the vote in the Senate on the farm relief bill, wherein he expressed himself as follows:

The vote in the Senate to-day at best adds further delay to farm relief and may gravely jeopardize the enactment of legislation. In rejecting the report of the Senate and House conferees, which report was agreed to by members of both parties, the Senate has in effect rejected a bill which provides for the creation of the most important agency ever set up in the Government to assist an industry—the proposed Federal farm board, endowed with extraordinary authority to reorganize the marketing system in the interest of the farmer, to stabilize his industry, and to carry out these arrangements in conjunction with farm cooperatives, with a capital of $500,000,000 as an earnest of the seriousness of the work. It is a proposal for steady upbuilding of agriculture onto firm foundations of equality with other industry, and would remove the agricultural problem from politics and place it in the realm of business.

The conferees' bill carried out the plan advanced in the campaign in every particular. Every other plan of agricultural relief was rejected in that campaign, and this plan was one of the most important issues in the principal agricultural States and was given as a mandate by an impressive majority in these States. Subsidies were condemned in the course of the campaign, and the so-called debenture plan—that is, the giving of subsidies on exports—was not raised by either party, nor by its proponents.

No serious attempt has been made to meet the many practical objections I and leaders in Congress have advanced against this proposal. It was not accepted by the House of Representatives and has been overwhelmingly condemned by the press and is opposed by many leading farm organizations, for no matter what the theory of the export subsidy may be in the practical world we live in it will not bring equality, but will bring further disparity to agriculture. It will bring immediate profits to some speculators and disaster to the farmer.

I earnestly hope that the Congress will enact the conferees' report and allow us to enter upon the building of a sound agricultural system rather than to longer deprive the farmer of the relief which he sorely needs.

In order to properly reflect the sentiment on the debenture amendment it seems to me that a quotation from one of the leading daily papers of the Middle West is here worth while, in which it is suggested that the debenture amendment is more properly a part of the tariff bill. The Des Moines Register, editorially, under date of June 11, 1929, made the following suggestions:

If we go no farther into the bill than to read the first paragraph, why should not the bill have the benefit of every doubt? That paragraph reads: "It is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to promote the effective merchandising of agricultural commodities in interstate and foreign commerce so that the industry of agriculture will be placed on a basis of economic equality with other industries."

How can Congress commit itself to any such program in any such formal way and not work out all the details as market conditions suggest them? Suppose everything not to be in the bill the western farmer would have in it, does not the bill open up a program of enormous possibilities?

If they will not do that, why do they not hook the debenture program onto the tariff bill, to which it really belongs, and let the farm bill go through and let the President name his farm board and get the work started?

The Waterloo Tribune, under date of June 11, 1929, in an editorial entitled "Put Hoover in Hole," made the following observations:

The only way they can get Hoover in a hole is to defeat the House farm relief bill, and then they will be putting agriculture in a much bigger hole. They will be delaying farm-relief legislation, just as they have delayed it for a half-dozen years.

The sensible thing is to get what farm-relief legislation Hoover wants now. Legislation to improve on it can be had at sessions in the future.

In the House, wherein the debenture amendment was defeated by a vote of 250 to 113, the controlling influence was not the merits or the lack of merits in the debenture amendment. It was purely an effort on the part of the House to assure the acceptance of the farm bill at the hands of the President and to make available for the benefit of the farmers of the Middle West the observations of the board appointed as experts to study the problem, having at their disposal a Government fund of $500,000,000. No one can discredit the effect of an organization of this kind, financed as authorized in this bill, upon the general price trend of farm commodities brought under the provisions of the bill. It was in order to bring this assistance to the farmers of the Middle West that the House took a decided stand against the debenture amendment.

However, the debenture amendment will in all probability have additional consideration at the hands of the Senate, and probably at the hands of the House. As heretofore suggested the debenture amendment is more properly a part of the tariff bill than of the farm bill. Senator BROOKHART, in the Senate under date of June 12, 1929, made the following proposal:

I propose that the debenture be issued to the Federal farm board instead of the speculators, whom the president and I both heartily condemn. I propose that the farm board be given authority to use these debentures exactly as the President of the United States himself had authority to use the funds of the Government in the Food Administration and the wheat corporation, including the authority to pay losses.

This suggestion embodies the proposal of a revolving fund wherein the debenture and the funds accumulated therefrom would accrue to the benefit of the Federal farm board to assist them in carrying on their undertaking. It is true this suggestion is new and has not been discussed from many angles. It is also true that the debenture proposal has not been discussed on merit and has not been criticized as it will be when it is proposed as a part of the tariff bill. I am, therefore, making the observation that for those friendly to the debenture plan there is room for a great many helpful suggestions, and to those opposed to the plan it might be suggested that the present rate on tobacco would authorize a bounty of 17½ cents a pound. It has been suggested that this bounty about equals the cost of production, and those opposed to the debenture should look through the commodities of which we export a considerable amount, and determine whether or not the producers could afford to expand their production for the tariff bounty alone, as proposed in the debenture plan.

The complications of the debenture program as shown by Congressman COLE, of Iowa, and Congressman TEMPLE, of Pennsylvania, are also worthy of serious consideration. Whether or not we would complicate our relations with other countries to where the debenture would be more of an embarrassment than a benefit is worthy of serious consideration. To those of us who have some time on our hands, it seems to me that a careful research along the lines above suggested will be helpful in reaching a conclusion as to whether or not the debenture plan is feasible as a part of either the tariff or the farm-relief legislation.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I voted for the farm bill without the debenture in it when it first passed the House, and I voted to approve two conference reports without the debenture in it. When the Senate finally forced the House to give us a mere vote on debenture, the floor leader having moved the previous question after introducing the resolution which put the debenture advocates in the negative, on that vote I voted in favor of debenture. This was the only opportunity I had during this session to express myself on the thing that I had constantly said I thought would help the bill. I did not vote to leave the amendment in with the idea of defeating the bill. If the farm bill is going to be a success without the debenture, then the mere fact that it is in the bill and optional with the board should not in any way make it dangerous. If the bill is not going to be a success, then they will want something more.

There is nothing in this bill that is designed to take care of the great problem of the exportable surplus which means so much to the West in our wheat and to the South in her cotton. There is nothing in the bill that will raise the price of agricultural products. At the most, it will merely have a tendency to stabilize and help keep prices from going down unnecessarily, but it will never raise them.

Many members have taken the attitude that if this bill does not bring about agricultural equality that they will later be ready to put in the debenture or the equalization fee or something else. The solid unanimous vote east of the Alleghenies against the debenture reminds me of an incident of 40 years ago in Kansas. There was a sick person in the community who had the yellow jaundice. They regarded it as a skin disease. There was an old lady in the community who had a prickly machine full of fine needles that she would run over this person's body day by day as a cure. Finally the patient died. The post-mortem disclosed a complete stoppage of the gall bladder.

The East thinks agriculture has merely a skin disease, and they have demonstrated in the House tariff bill the same kind and gentle sympathy that the old lady demonstrated with her machine.

I have scanned, for the last three days, the newspapers to observe if there had been any great bonfire celebrations or barbecues or parades with bands in the agricultural districts over the passage of the farm bill, but I have failed to observe any. On the other hand, I read in all the morning papers the morning after the approval of both Houses on the conference report of the farm bill, the following exact words, quoting from the stock-market page of Wall Street:

Prominent in the day's news was the passage of the farm-relief measure without the debenture scheme, which was favorably received in Wall Street.

Mr. McCLOSKEY. Mr. Speaker, under permission granted for extension of remarks on the motion of the distinguished gentleman from Connecticut, the majority leader [Mr. TILSON], I desire to express and record my reactions relative thereto as this important matter has presented itself to me.

This country has adopted as a policy of government the tariff theory for the encouragement of industry. Agriculture is an "industry." If I am correctly informed, the largest single item of foreign export is cotton. It is our largest foreign-trade credit balance and, therefore, is just as important to New England as it is to the South, where produced, in its relation to world finance and our stability as a creditor nation, a most important factor to the banking and industrial life of this Nation. We encourage in every possible way the export of all other products of industry; why not those of agriculture?

Now, let us see: In my opinion, the automobile industry is more nearly on a basis for comparison with that of agriculture than any other commodity, in that we are the largest producers of automobiles in the world; in fact, like cotton, we produce more than all the rest of the world combined. In that way automobiles and cotton are comparable; then again automobiles need no tariff protection; it would avail nothing. The same as to cotton. So what do we do for the automobile industry to encourage that industry in foreign markets? (And, be it remembered, I make no complaint of that aid. By it we provide employment for thousands of American workmen and aid materially our foreign credit balance.) We encourage the automobile industry to produce cars for the foreign markets and aid them in competition with foreign manufacturers of automobiles by granting to cars for export a freight rate lower than the rate for domestic sale of the same product; for instance, the freight rate on automobiles (passenger) from Detroit, Mich., to San Francisco, Calif., for domestic sale or use is $4.65 per 100 pounds in carload lots, and on that same carload, from the same shipping point to the same destination for foreign sale or export, the freight rate is $2.10 per 100 pounds, less than 50 per cent of the domestic rate and a difference of $2.55 per 100 pounds in favor of cars for export, which, called by another name, is a debenture just the same of $2.55 per 100 pounds.

And so it is with reference to shipments to New Orleans, Savannah, or New York, varying only in the amounts or difference of freight rates to the different points. So that a debenture on cotton for export of 2 cents per pound is less than the debenture on automobiles for export. And inasmuch as a tariff would not reach either automobiles or cotton, this debenture or difference in freight rates constitutes and takes the place of tariff.

Mr. Speaker, I believe in the tariff theory of government. I voted for the tariff bill. In doing so I was in perfect harmony with my own views, the platform adopted at Houston, and the best interests of the people of my district. True, I believe some of the schedules in the tariff bill are too high, and I can see no reason for any tariff on cork inasmuch as we do not produce any cork whatever in the United States. But there is one thing to the credit of the Hawley tariff bill—it is a step toward protection for some of the industries of the South and the West. More will come just as surely as daylight follows darkness. When the next tariff bill is written let us hope that the South will be invited to sit in at the hearings and actually help write the bill.

The great dairying industry of this country is to-day located in the Central North and Northwest States, but because of the irresistible economic advantage of the South, where dairy herds can graze 12 months in the year instead of only 6 as in the North, in a few short years that industry will be located in Texas and the other Southern States, and then a tariff on dairy products will be a part of the platform of every candidate for Congress from the South and Southwest. No tariff bill can be written that will meet the approval of every section of the country because what is helpful to one is costly to another, and in its final analysis, as was said by Hancock, many years ago, "Tariff is a local question," and must of necessity ever be.

Mr. Speaker, that is why I voted for a debenture on farm products. To my mind the debenture is nothing more or less than an inverted tariff on cotton and other farm products of which we produce a surplus over domestic consumption. It would mean nearly $1,000,000 a year to Nueces County, only 1 of 11 counties in the district I have the honor to represent; over $500,000 to San Patricio County, and another million and a half dollars to the other counties of my district. Is not that stupendous sum enough to show you, Mr. Speaker, that tariff—whether called debenture or anything else—is a local issue to the Representative of that district or any district when confronted with a similar situation? Especially so when the manufacturing industries of every section of the country are getting all they possibly can through tariff protection. Who is to criticize the farmer element for trying to help themselves? "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

SENATE

FRIDAY, June 14, 1929

Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, D. D., minister of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church of the city of Washington, offered the following prayer:

O Thou, who givest to all men liberally and upbraideth not, grant that to-day Thy presence may bring to our troubled hearts a new calm, to our disturbed minds a new light, and to our uncertain ways a new leading. Glorify Thyself in Thy power to help, to heal, and to calm. Bless our homes and our absent loved ones. Watch tenderly over them we pray Thee, and may our hearts be filled with the love of God as the waters cover the depths of the sea. And unto Thee shall we ascribe all praise, world without end. Amen.
